Hughes Nearing Goal, Record in Sight

Wallace Favors Subsidization of Wheat Exports

World's Co-operation Is Urged to Maintain Normal Granary.

AAA Preparing For Crop Loans

By Robert C. Albright.

Subsidized export of American wheat "if it should become necessary" to assure this country's farmers a "fair share" of the world wheat market, was proposed yesterday by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace.

He called for world co-operation in an "international ever-normal granary" program following the lines of his own domestic plan for carrying over supplies in "fat" years for use in "lean" periods.

Wallace indicated the United States will not resort to subsidized export of wheat unless it is denied a reasonable share of the world wheat market.

Huge Harvest Faced.

His statement was made at a press conference as the AAA prepared to announce crop loans to farmers faced with the second largest wheat harvest in history.

Wheat crop loans are expected to average 59 to 60 cents a bushel on the farm, ranging from 50 cents in Idaho to more than 70 in Maryland and Virginia. Loans on wheat at terminal markets will average 70 cents, it was indicated. Differences would reflect freight and other charges.

Details of the loan plan virtually were completed, as the Commodity Credit Corporation made $100,000,000 available to launch the program. Chairman Jesse H. Jones, of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, said additional amounts will be advanced as they are needed.

Lower Loans Seen.

The loan average would be near the bottom of the 59 to 85-cent loan range permitted under farm act formulas. A possible club for an international agreement on "orderly" wheat marketing was seen in the low loan figure and in possible subsidized export of America's towering wheat surplus.

Wallace's bid for an "international ever-normal granary" came on the eve of the opening of the international wheat conference in London today, with Ambassador Joseph Kennedy and Dr. A. G. Black, of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, representing this country. The Agriculture Secretary said he had discussed the proposal with Black, and it may be advanced at the conference.

A world outlet for part of the 967,412,000-bushel bumper wheat crop predicted Monday has been vigorously sought by AAA officials in the face of large crops abroad and discouraging export prospects.

2 Girls Assert Escort Killed Maryland Man

Three Admit Assaults on Rich Farmer Slain at Port Republic.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Prince Frederick, Md., July 13.—A man and two young married women were held tonight in connection with the slaying of William Warren Gantt, 55-year-old wealthy farmer.

Gantt, his face and head battered and six bullet wounds in his body, was found in the yard of his home near Port Republic. Medical examiners said he had been dead about 14 hours.

Magistrate W. W. Duke issued murder warrants against the three suspects, who were arrested earlier today on another charge near Fredericksburg, Va. They gave their names as Walter Stinnett, 24, of Drum Point, Md.; Mrs. Margaret Abell, 18, of Dowell, Md., and Mrs. Bettie Bierner, 18, of Baltimore.

Chief of Police S. B. Perry, of Fredericksburg, notified authorities here that the three had admitted participating in the attack on Gantt, but each denied the killing.

After the crime the suspects were quoted by Chief Perry as saying they took Gantt's car and drove to a beach near Indianhead, Md. There they abandoned the machine and made their way across the Potomac River in a stolen rowboat, according to Perry.

Gantt was last seen alive Monday night near Port Republic accompanied by a man and two women.

D.C. Building Projects Win $2,800,000

A $27,000,000 building program for the District advanced on several fronts yesterday.

Administrator Ickes announced Presidential approval of PWA loans and grants amounting to $2,800,000 for Juvenile and Municipal Court buildings and an addition to Gallinger Hospital.

Early approval was expected of loan and grant applications for an additional $9,555,755 for start of a municipal center, a National Guard Armory, modernization of the District Jail and other improvements.

Nathan Straus, administrator of the United States Housing Authority, predicted the proposed $15,000,000 slum clearance and low-cost housing program here would get under way by Thanksgiving as he placed responsibility for its progress squarely on the shoulders of John Ihlder, executive officer of the Alley Dwelling Authority.

Ihlder Makes Reply.

Ihlder replied that he looked forward to co-operation from the USHA in quickly acquiring sites and developing the proposed projects.

At the same time it appeared that a large portion of the families in need of decent housing here would be ineligible for occupation of the proposed new low-cost homes because of being on relief.

The PWA allotments were:

A $575,000 grant and $825,000 loan for a three-story Municipal Court building to cost $1,500,000.

A $247,500 grant and $302,500 loan for a four-story Juvenile Court building to cost $550,000.

A $337,500 grant and $412,500 loan for a 300-bed addition to Gallinger Hospital to cost $750,000.

Had Applied For More.

Engineer Commissioner Dan I. Sultan declared that the District Comsioners were delighted to hear that the money had been allotted. He said they hoped for more, since they had made detailed and regular application for all the $18,500,000 which a recent act of Congress allowed them to apply for.

Although lack of funds has prevented drafting of complete plans,

Mattson Slaying 'Solution' Failure; Suspect in Asylum

Tacoma, Wash., July 13 (AP).—A hoped-for solution of the Mattson kidnaping-slaying "blew up" today, leaving the 17-month mystery still unsolved.

At Spokane, Dr. M. W. Conway, superintendent of a State insane hospital, said a man who called himself "Frank Olson," and confessed the abduction, was an inmate of the asylum at the time Charles Mattson, 10, was kidnaped and slain.

"Olson's real name is Lester Mead," Dr. Conway said. "He is entirely harmless."

Olson was arrested Friday night at Ritzville after he had frightened a housewife. Chief Cole said that while being questioned the man started sobbing and told police it was he who kidnaped the Mattson boy and strangled him.

Shouts for McCarran Stop Roosevelt Talk

By the Associated Press.

Aboard President Roosevelt's Train En Route to San Francisco, July 13.—A station crowd at Carlin, Nev., interrupted a talk by President Roosevelt today to applaud Senator McCarran (Democrat), Nevada, a bitter foe of some New Deal legislative proposals.

The President was accompanied to the rear platform of his special train by Albert Hilliard, opposing McCarran for renomination. Hilliard has pledged full support to the Administration. McCarran, who had boarded the train at Ogden, Utah, came onto the platform after Mr. Roosevelt had started speaking.

"Hello, Pat," someone called, and a round of applausc rippled through the crowd. The President, smiling, stopped speaking momentarily and shook hands with McCarran.

McCarran thereafter joined frequently with the crowd in applauding Mr. Roosevelt's statements that water should be put to its best possible use for the benefit of residents of Nevada and the Nation as a whole.

Before the platform appearance, McCarran had told reporters he thought Mr. Roosevelt's cross-country tour had made no change in political sentiment. McCarran was one of the Senators who fought the President's court reorganization bill

U.S. Still Gains By Competing, Survey Shows

By Sidney Olson.

While reporting that 40 per cent of the Nation's industry is controlled by giant corporations, a Brookings Institution study, published yesterday, maintained that economic progress, rather than repressive monopoly, has resulted through widespread but intensive competition.

The report by the private research agency stressed that beneficial competition still is the rule in American industrial life, in refuting the theory that the era of competitive capitalism is dead.

Prewar Era Recalled.

A similar 40 per cent of industry was thus controlled as far back as 1900, the report noted, but it emphasized that the character of the controlling corporations has almost entirely changed.

In prewar times industrial combines strove to control markets, suppress competition, dominate patents and processes and, primarily, to raise prices, according to the authors, Edwin G. Nourse, director of the economies division of

Va. Official Shot; Jail Father-in-Law At Williamsburg

Williamsburg, Va., July 13 (AP).—Dr. John D. Porterfield, director of the State's peninsula health district, was shot and critically wounded at his home here today. Police said his father-in-law, Noel Bush, was being held for questioning.

Herman Tyler, Williamsburg police officer, said he placed Bush in jail here on a charge of "felonious shooting" several hours after Dr. Porterfield was shot at his home.

Wounded in the abdomen by a bullet, the young public health officer was in critical condition at the Bell Hospital tonight. He was given a blood transfusion.

As health district director, Dr. Porterfield heads the State's public health work in four counties of the Virginia peninsula and in Williamsburg.

Ross Kidnap-Killer Executed in Illinois

Chicago (Thursday), July 4 (AP).—John Henry Seadlund, a lumberjack who turned kidnaper, died in the electric chair today for the $50,000 abduction of Charles S. Ross, retired Chicago manufacturer.

The execution, at the Cook County Jail, was fixed for 12:01 a. m. Central Standard Time but a delay in preparing the chair made the time 12:08 a. m. (1:08 a. m. E. S. T.)

Seadlund walked into the chamber steadily, without assistant.

Senator Tydings, of Maryland, declared open war last night on any persons appointed by President Roosevelt to fill vacancies resulting from what Tydings termed the "political purge."

Sen. Wagner Urges FBI Investigations Of Two Lynchings

Albany, N. Y., July 13 (U.P.).—Senator Wagner (Democrat), New York, called tonight for a Department of Justice investigation of two recent lynchings in the South and renewed his plea for Federal anti-lynching legislation.

The Senator, in Albany for the State constitutional convention, sent a telegram to Attorney General Cummings requesting the investigation, to "forestall a new wave of lynchings during the adjournment of Congress."

Wagner dispatched the telegram to Cummings as result of lynchings at Rolling Fork, Miss., and Arabi, Ga.

The Senator said past experience had proved lynching activities decreased while Congress was considering the anti-lynching bill, "only to rise again when hope for passage of such legislation died."

Cardenas Planning To Visit Roosevelt

Mexico City, July 13 (U.P.).—The newspaper Grafico, quoting "well informed circles," today said President Lazaro Cardenas will visit President Roosevelt off the Mexican west coast during Mr. Roosevelt's vacation cruise in the Pacific.

Reserves Called.

By the United Press.

Shanghai (Thursday), July 14.—Gen. Chiang Kai-shek today threw the bulk of his last reserves into a land, water and air offensive against large Japanese forces driving toward China's provisional capital in Hankow and claimed a series of spectacular victories.

Seven or more Japanese warships were damaged in aerial bombings of the Japanese fleet in the Yangtze River below Kiukiang, the Chinese said, and correspondents confirmed that at least one Japanese minelayer was proceeding to Shanghai with her stern partly blown out.

[In Washington, the Chinese Embassy reported three ships were sunk and two badly damaged.—Editor's note.]

In South China the Kwangtung Provincial Government asserted Chinese forces had reoccupied most of Namoa Island, off Swatow, which was seized by Japanese blue-jackets last month.

Chinese forces still were holding the waterfront of Kiukiang, a key city in Hankow's southeastern defenses, and were shelling the Japanese armies around Hukow, east of Kiukiang across the entrance to Lake Poyang.

Japanese warplanes today attacked Canton for the third successive day in an apparent renewal of routine daily bombardments designed to cripple this South China port through which the central gov-

Woman Is Hunted As Companion of Vanished Canoeist

A report that an unidentified woman was with a mysterious "T. D. Sharp," who disappeared on the Potomac River Monday in a rented canoe, spurred a police search for the vanished man yesterday.

Members of the Harbor Precinct cruised the upper river in a vain effort to find the canoe, which they feared may have overturned and lodged against the rocks.

"Sharp's" disappearance was reported to police Tuesday by James M. Farley, employe of a boathouse. He said the man, who signed his name as Sharp, rented the canoe and left his clothing in a locker.

Fliers Speeding Over Canada on Last Lap of Dash

HOPE TO LAND THIS AFTERNOON, ENDING FLIGHT IN UNDER 4 DAYS

Plan Stop for Fuel at Winnipeg; Widow of Wiley Post Congratulates Airmen Smashing His 1933 Mark.

By the United Press.

Fairbanks, Alaska, July 13.—Aiming for a globe-circling record of less than four days, Howard Hughes and four companions roared away from Fairbanks in their twin-motored monoplane this afternoon to negotiate the final 3,380 miles to New York, starting point of their record-breaking flight.

The fliers were in Fairbanks only 1 hour and 18 minutes, departing at 3:36 p. m. (8:36 p. m. E. S. T.) They arrived here from Yakutsk, Siberia, at 2:18 p. m. (9:18 p. m. E. S. T.)

Hughes had until 6:20 p. m. E. S. T. Thursday to complete the flight within four days.

It was expected the plane would reach New York about 3 p. m. Thursday.

Confers on Route.

When the fliers left here their elapsed time out of New York was 3 days 2 hours 16 minutes. They were 3 days 4 hours 19 minutes ahead of the record of the late Wiley Post, who was 6 days 6 hours 35 minutes out of New York when he left Fairbanks at the time he set the present record of 7 days 18 hours 50 minutes in 1933.

Disdaining rest during the brief layover, the young millionaire conferred with Joe Crosson, famed "mercy flier" of the Arctic, on flying conditions in the interior of the Canadian Northwest Territories, over which the route of the five fliers lay.

While they talked, airport attendants pumped 1,700 gallons of gasoline and 200 gallons of oil into the tanks of the bulb-nosed silver craft.

The fliers gave up hopes of hopping nonstop to New York when they found the Fairbanks runway was only 2,800 feet long.

Taking No Chances.

"We want no mishaps at this late date," Radio Engineer Richard Stoddart said.

Just before the takeoff, Hughes said he would continue to New York if his gasoline supply held out, but would land at Minneapolis if it were in danger of becoming exhausted.

Three hours later a message from the plane to the United Air Transport Station at Fort Nelson said that Hughes planned to land at Winnipeg.

The position given by the plane at that time was only approximately 450 miles out of Fairbanks, indicating that the plane's speed had been reduced to about 150 miles an hour. This, observers believed, was because the ship was crossing mountains where flying was perilous.

"No Time to Talk"

The Texan and his four companions were eager to get back into the air. When asked for details of the flight over the great Siberian wastes, Hughes replied:

"I haven't time to talk now. We must get back in the air and keep moving."

Franco Takes Vital Highway, Rail Junction

By the United Press.

Hendaye, France, July 13.—Insurgent headquarters at Teruel announced today that Sarrion, vital link on the Teruel-Sagunto highway, had been captured.

The insurgents claimed their forces broke through on a 7-mile front after a heavy bombardment of Sarrion. They claimed an advance of 6 miles through territory which the loyalists have defended fiercely for several weeks.

The capture of Sarrion will open the highway and railroad for an advance on Segorbe, where the insurgents plan to join forces operating in the Sierra Espadan for a drive to Sagunto and Valencia.

The fall of Sarrion followed closely an announcement from insurgent quarters that Gen. Franco had taken personal charge of his insurgent eastern armies when his troops bogged down on the Valencia front. He is said to have ordered withdrawal of enough troops and material from Catalan and other fronts to regain his mastery along the sea-coast.

Californians Drive Out C.I.O.; Shoot 1 Unionist and Beat 30

By the Associated Press.

Westwood, Calif., July 13.—One man was shot in the arm and 30 or more were beaten today in a "purge" of C. I. O. unionists by citizens and members of an independent union in this lumber town.

Nearly 900 men drove about 125 C. I. O. unionists and organizers from the town and warned them: "Don't come back!"

Fire hoses were turned on the evicted men. Crowds went to houses where C. I. O. families were known to reside and drove them from the town.

The Red River Lumber Mills were closed Monday after a wage dispute. C. I. O. unionists went on strike last Thursday, protesting a 17½ per cent wage slash.

A crowd began gathering at 1 a. m. today and at 5 a. m. someone rang the general fire alarm. Clubs and pick-axes came into use.

Sheriff Olin Johnson appealed to Gov. Frank F. Merriam for troops, but later canceled the request and said the town had quieted down. A platoon from the 250th Coast Artillery started from Lodi, but a courier was sent to intercept it.

Deficit Estimate Raises Question Of Tax Increase

Treasury Gathers Data; Decision Expected Next Autumn.

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt's estimate of a $4,000,000,000 deficit for the present fiscal year raised the question yesterday whether the Administration would ask Congress to enact additional or higher taxes.

Treasury tax experts, unwilling to venture an answer, said Mr. Roosevelt and department executives probably would decide next fall.

Nevertheless, the Treasury already is gathering data that Congress may use in drafting another tax revision bill. Department experts are studying the integration of Federal and State tax systems and entire field of exemptions and credits.

May Seek Equalization.

Any recommendations made, one of the experts said, may be directed primarily at making the tax laws more workable and equitable, rather than at increasing their yield.

Three factors may result in a decision against tax changes designed to raise more money.

Existing tax laws brought in a record amount of $6,241,000,000 in the fiscal year ended June 30. A major pick-up in business would result in an even larger volume of revenue from present levies.

Many members of Congress say imposition of additional taxes would be a blow to business confidence.

Mr. Roosevelt himself, in discussing the new budget summary, made no further reference to balancing the budget.

Added Revenue Difficult.

Treasury authorities, furthermore, said yesterday they knew no formula for raising any substantial additional sums easily and painlessly. A balanced budget could be obtained by levying more taxes, they said, but a reduction in Government expenditures or an up-turn in business would be just as effective.

President Roosevelt has made it clear, however, that Congress will be asked to take some action on taxes at its next session. He has intimated, at least, that he might press again for a heavier levy on undistributed corporate profits and for a graduated capital gains tax.

Reciprocity Out of Favor.

He has suggested, too, that Congress see what could be done about eliminating reciprocal exemptions accorded by the State and Federal governments to the interest on Federal, State and municipal securities, and to the incomes of Federal, State and municipal officers.

Roswell Magill, Treasury Undersecretary, said additional revisions under consideration included:

Repeal of more manufacturers' excise taxes, which were intended to be temporary.

Simplification and consolidation of administrative provisions.

Further provision for application of net operating losses of one year against net operating income of subsequent years.

The Gallup Poll

California Strongly Pro-Roosevelt on Eve of President's Visit; General Popularity Off.

By DR. GEORGE GALLUP.
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, July 13.—Arriving in San Francisco tomorrow to aid Senator McAdoo's candidacy for renomination, President Roosevelt will find California one of the most pro-Roosevelt States outside the Solid South.

George Gallup

According to Institue surveys throughout the State, more than six out of every ten California voters are for the President. But his popularity has fallen off sharply during the last two years, being 6 points below the 1936 election, and only slightly higher than the 1932 election.

The trend of Roosevelt sentiment in the State has been as follows:

Major Party Vote in California

	For Roosevelt	Against
1932 election	61%	39%
1936 election	69	31
Today	63	37

The continued Democratic sentiment in the Golden State is unusual in the light of its political traditions. Up to 1932 California was a stalwart Republican State, having gone Democratic only three times since the Civil War. It deserted not only the Republican Party in 1932, but also one of its outstanding Republican citizens then in the White House, Herbert Hoover.

However, the State's overwhelming loyalty ao President Roosevelt does not extend to the point of indorsing him for a third term. When queried by the institute, voters in the State opposed a third term by a majority of 7 to 3. Even Democrats—those who cast their ballots for Roosevelt in 1936—are opposed, 55 per cent voting against a third term, 45 per cent in favor.

Although the State is noted for its political progressivism and for such social movements as the Townsend Plan and Upton Sinclair's EPIC party, the great majority of its voters think that the New Deal has gone far enough to the left. Thus, when questioned recently as to whether the Roosevelt Administration should be more liberal or more conservative in the next two years, California voters were 7 to 3 in favor of a more conservative course.

Section Heavily Democratic.

The Pacific Coast section—California, Oregon and Washington—emerged from the 1936 election as the second most Democratic area in the country, giving Roosevelt a majority not much smaller (68 per cent) than that of the South (76 per cent). If the President were to travel into Oregon and Washington, he would find sentiment about the same as in California. The three States have voted almost identically in the last two presidential elections. Today the institute finds the Coast section as a whole 65 per cent for Roosevelt, 35 per cent opposed.

Trend of Roosevelt Popularity in California

Lawyer Barred By Labor Board Wins a Hearing

Weirton Counsel Will Give Arguments July 20 in Unprecedented Case.

By the United Press.

The National Labor Relations Board last night set July 20 for hearing arguments on an appeal from an unprecedented ruling by a trial examiner barring a corporation lawyer from further participation in an NLRB hearing.

The appeal was brought by Clyde A. Armstrong, chief counsel for the Weirton Steel Co., who was excluded from a hearing at Steubenville, Ohio, Monday. Trial Examiner Edward Grandison Smith ruled Armstrong guilty of "defiant, contemptuous and contumacious conduct."

Examiner "Hanged."

Steubenville, Ohio, July 13 (AP).—The Weirton Steel Co. sought today the reinstatement of an attorney expelled from a national labor board hearing following an uproarious demonstration against the board in which Examiner Edward Grandison Smith was hanged in effigy.

The demonstration in front of the Federal Building replaced a scheduled mass march on steelworkers from Weirton, W. Va., to Steubenville, canceled after the board abruptly transferred the 11-month-old inquiry against the company to Pittsburgh.

Between 2,000 and 3,000 workers, merchants and sympathizers cheered as a straw-stuffed headless dummy, clad in blue denim overalls and shirt and bearing a placard "Grandstand Smith," dangled on a rope from a hotel opposite the Federal Building. Earlier, police cut down another effigy of Smith, who barred company attorney Clyde Armstrong from the hearing.

Smith, elderly, silver-haired Clarksburg, W. Va., attorney, was at his home during the day and did not comment on the protest. Board Attorney Isadore Polier and an associate, taking along bulky records of the hearing, left for Pittsburgh before dawn with a police escort.

Armstrong was barred from the hearing after he ignored Smith's order to "sit down" as he attempted to object to proceedings at the inquiry. Smith termed his behavior "defiant, contemptuous and contumacious" and asserted the attorney failed to show "repentance or remorse."

Free Speech Held 'Qualified' Right

Newark, N. J., July 13 (AP).—Vice Chancellor Maja Leon Berry held today the right of free speech was a "qualified" constitutional right, rather than an "absolute" right.

His interpretation was included in an opinion in which he enjoined the C. I. O.-affiliated Furniture Workers Union, Local 66, and two union memgers from distributing circulars in the vicinity of the stores of customers of the Metropolitan Upholstery Co.

New York, July 13 (AP).—Offers of clothing valued at $10,999,667.59 have been received by the Federal Government in its program to distribute garments to the needy, T. J. Forde, New York procurement officer of the Federal Treasury, said today.

The Government has allotted $10,000,000 of WPA funds for the clothing, and Forde said some bids, including those for dress suits and baby's play suits, will be eliminated to cut the figure to the right level.

Foreign Radio To Hurt Trade, Institute Hears

European Broadcasts Held Perilous Relations With Latin America.

By the Associated Press.

Charlottesville, Va., July 13.—An official of the International General Electric Co. indicated tonight European nations, by means of radio broadcasts, were attempting to injure United States trade relations with Latin America.

William V. B. Van Dyck, assistant to the president of the company, spoke before the Institute of Public Affairs of the University of Virginia.

"There can be no doubt," he said, "that the purpose of this barrage of radio propaganda from Europe is primarily to develop closer trade relations with overseas countries. Its effet, if successful, would be at the expense of the United States."

Describes Atiractions.

Van Dyck described at length the efforts of United States radio companies to attract listeners in Latin America. He said not only were programs broadcast in Spanish for the majority of the republics, but special programs in Portuguese also were broadcast for Brazilian listeners.

He indicated all-wave receiving sets were gaining in popularity in Argentina and Brazil, where previously long-wave had prevailed.

Earlier in the day, William A. Reid, former foreign trade adviser of the Pan American Union and now a lecturer at Georgetown University, spoke on social security in South America.

Reid indicated many people in the Southern republics "are on the rising tides of betterment or security, although much still remains to be accomplished before hardships, primitive conditions or low standards of living are removed completely."

Parmelee Speaks.

Dr. Maurice Parmelee, sociologist and psychologist, formerly with the foreign service of the Department of State, said world-wide instability and insecurity cannot be prevented by international good will, but only by a favorable transformation of the prevailing economic, political and social system.

In a discussion of relations of church and state, Dr. Henry Smith Leiper, foreign secretary of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, said the church has a great mission to perform in lifting the foreign policies of nations from selfishness of materialistic considerations to a level consonant with the ideal of brotherhood.

Frederic P. Lee, former chairman of the legislative drafting bureau of the United States Senate, said the inability of States to deal with major economic and social problems has created a new Federal-State relationship for considering problems in the solution of which both agencies of government in the Federal Union must share.

Dr. Ch'ao-Ting Chi, an editor of Amerasia and a lecturer in the new school of social research, spoke of the needs of China and of its stand against the Japanese.

U. S. Trucks Defy Pickets on Silver Hoard's Transfer

The union charges Peter J. Malley, a civilian truckman under contract with the Government, violated a union agreement by locking out 14 guards assigned to the trucks. Malley is using one union guard on each truck and is being assisted by police and Government guards. The union contends two of its members should be asigned to each truck.

The ceremony will be Saturday at the Menuhin home at Los Gatos.

Astute Business! He Rents Articles, Then Sells Them

A crime was uncovered by detectives yesterday before the victims were aware they had lost more than $2,000 worth of property.

A 21-year-old youth confessed, according to police, the appropriation and sale of six movie projecting machines, two adding machines, three typewriters and a movie camera.

The suspect was seized by Detective Sergts. Curtis Trammell, Thomas Sullivan, Oscar Mansfield and David Fletcher. He admitted, they said, selling the equipment to various local second-hand dealers.

Suspicions were aroused three weeks ago when the stolen machines, all new, began to appear in the junk shops. Checking, detectives found out the machines had been rented to a young man. All of the machines were recovered.

Helium Treatment May Bring Relief To Asthma Victims

Helium, noninflammable gas used in dirigibles, now holds promise as a relief for chronic asthma.

The Public Health Service yesterday reported encouraging results in treatment of asthma, accompanied by labored breathing with a 4-to-1 mixture of helium and oxygen.

In New York City, 90 per cent of 54 cases showed improvement, and similar success has been reported in various hospitals throughout the country, the Public Health Service said.

"Although not proposed as a cure for asthma, helium has even been found useful in terminating certain cases of severe asthma."

Informer Absent, 3 Cases Dropped

Three cases involving violation of liquor regulations were nolle prossed in Police Court yesterday because of the absence of an informer who was to serve as Government witness in all three.

Assistant Corporation Counsel John O'Day nolle prossed the cases in conformance with Judge John P. McMahon's announcement last month that he would grant no continuances because of the absence of informers.

Larceny Suspect Is Questioned on 'Lipstick Murders'

New York, July 13 (AP).—Accused of grand larceny and held in $50,000 bail, Walter H. Wiley, 19, was questioned today about the unsolved "lipstick murders" of last October 2.

Deputy Chief Inspector Lagarenne said he had located a boy who told him Wiley had threatened to "give you the red circle, too" if the boy didn't help him on a burglary.

Frances Hajek, 20, and her sweetheart, Lewis Weiss, 19, were found slain in a wooded section of Queens last October 3. Both had been shot through the head. A red circle had been traced with the girl's lipstick on the forehead of each victim.

Lagarenne said Baltimore police disputed Wiley's alibi he was there on the day of the crime.

Police Seek Thief Believed Wounded

Police last night posted lookouts at all hospitals in search of a colored man believed to have been wounded by a policeman who surprised him stripping a stolen automobile.

Earle Ponders Special Session On Graft Quiz

By the Associated Press.

Harrisburg, Pa., July 13.—Gov. George H. Earle tonight called upon Pennsylvania's Democratic majority in the Legislature to back him up in his attack upon judges concerned with the primary campaign charges to be considered by a grand jury next month.

The Governor sought to unite key lawmakers on a policy in the case which has become the most spectacular of the three and one-half years of the Democratic administration.

Earle, the party's nominee for United States Senator, indicated the legislators might decide whether to call a special meeting of the General Assembly, with powers to subpena witnesses, and, in effect, take over the inquiry scheduled to start in the Dauphin County (Harrisburg) Court, August 8.

The Governor said he could summon the Legislature into extraordinary session "within 48 hours" if he choose.

Some of the lawmakers opposed the idea yesterday when the conferences started.

The Governor struck at the Republican majority on the Supreme Court bench. The justices considered a petition for a grand jury investigation and then, without a decision, assigned the case to Judge Paul N. Schaeffer, of a county neighboring Dauphin, for action.

Judge Schaeffer ordered the inquiry recently. The Governor calling it "political persecution," says he will not "tolerate" it.

He said the six Republican justices of the Supreme Court were "partisan to the last degree;" that Judge Schaeffer was one of the "worst reactionaries in Pennsylvania" and had been "flagrantly unethical" by conferring with one of the Dauphin County judges.

Bandits Who Got $2,700 In Pa. Are Sought Here

Roads and bridges leading into the District were watched by police yesterday for a gang of robbers who escaped with a pay roll in Chester, Pa. The bandits fled in this direction.

The money was taken from the office of the A. W. Wirz Manufacturing Co. by two men who threatened half a dozen employes and forced the bookkeeper to open a safe.

Ailing D. C. Man Kills Self by Auto Gas in Garage

Despondent over ill-health, Aloysius A. Baldus, 47, an employe of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, died yesterday of carbon monoxide poisoning in a garage in nearby Maryland.

Found slumped on the rear seat of his car, Baldus, who lives at 4908 Third street northwest, had been dead about ten hours, police said. The garage is attached to a vacant house in Avenel, Md.

Police said Baldus had stuffed old clothes into the cracks under the garage door. Relatives said he left no notes, but had been under the care of a physician "off and on."

His wife, Mrs. Pearl Baldus, is now under the care of a physican. A certificate of suicide was issued by Acting Coroner Charles M. Woodson, of Silver Spring.

Northerners Take Stand in Rates Hearing

Gov. Lehman Will Appear Tomorrow as Witness on Southern Request.

By the Associated Press.

Buffalo, N. Y., July 13.—Two northern traffic experts took the witness stand today as the Interstate Commerce Commission began hearing the reaction of northern interests to a southern appeal for "parity" in railroad freight rates.

William L. O'Neil, New York, chairman of the trunk line association's general freight committee, asserted that northern railroad lines "do not arbitrarily oppose the southern lines in establishing rates lower than normal."

Earlier today, a southern traffic expert, James D. Patterson, of Savannah, Ga., port authority, told the commission the South's interior cities need adjusted rates if they are to develop industrially.

The second witness for the Northern interests, James P. Harrington, of Boston, said that although Southern stone quarries have been seeking lower freight rates to the North, they have made little use of similarly favorable freight rates in their own territory.

He told the commission that many stone quarries in the South were shipping their products not by rail, but by truck.

"Southern carriers have given Southern stone producers lower competitive rates," he asserted, "yet in the face of this co-operation, the quarries are not taking advantage of the rate scale in the South which they are now seeking on shipments to Northern points."

He said granite and marble production was declining in New England while increasing in the South, notably in Georgia.

"And there are still enormous deposits of granite and marble in New England which have been unexploited," he added.

Britain Balked In Effort to Halt Ship Bombings

$114,505,000 More for Planes Asked; Food Plans Attacked.

By the Associated Press.

London, July 13.—The Chamberlain government today disclosed new stalemates in its efforts to stop the rain of Spanish bombs on civilians and British merchant ships.

At the same time the government asked $114,505,000 more for its air rearmament program, and fought off a House of Commons attack on its alleged failure to encourage home agriculture production as a safety measure in event of an aerial blockade in wartime.

Declaring Britain was "not prepared to acquiesce in repetition of attacks of a certain character" on her shipping, Prime Minister Chamberlain informed commons the government had rejected the suggestion of insurgent Gen. Franco that Almeria be made an "immune" port for British ships visiting government Spain.

He announced Britain's effort to set up a neutral commission to investigate bombings of civilians had failed.

Chamberlain disclosed a new note from the insurgent general insisted British ships had not been attacked intentionally.

"An attack on an isolated vessel must of its nature be deliberate, particularly in those instances where the vessel has been reconnoitered previous to being bombed and has been machine-gunned afterward," the prime minister said.

In the background of the debate on Britain's food supply was the powerful Lord Beaverbrook press, which for months has hammered at the slogan, "You can't eat bombs" and urged greater agricultural production at home.

David Lloyd George, World War premier, declared farmers of the country were "seething with discontent and the whole country is alarmed at the neglect by the government of measures for putting us in a position in event of war which would spare this country the horrors of starvation."

Barcelona Accepts Plan.

Barcelona, July 13 (AP).—The Spanish government has accepted in principle the British-sponsored plan for withdrawal of foreign soldiers from the Spanish civil war.

In a note to Britain published by the foreign office tonight, the government said it always had favored the elimination of foreign influences from the conflict.

Gen. Jose Miaja is reported to have 200,000 loyalist troops on the Teruel - Sagunto front, opposing fewer than 100,000 insurgents who have, however, greater artillery and air power.

The loyalists were "digging in" feverishly for a final defense of Sagunto and Segorbe, keys to the defense of Valencia, and Franco wants to smash through before fortifications and machine gun emplacements can be completed.

Severe fighting was reported today in the Sierra Espadan sector as two insurgent columns fought down the southern mountain slopes toward Segorbe and the Teruel-Sagunto road.

Potomac Dredging Below Bridge Not To Hinder Traffic

"Housecleaning" on the bed of the Potomac River in the vicinity of Highway Bridge will last for at least the remainder of this week, but there will be no more interference with the draw span, E. J. Merrick, jr., of the Army engineers' office, said last night.

The Army dredge Atlas will continue to pick up sunken logs and other debris downstream from the bridge and then clean up the river bed below the Virginia span. The bridge piers along the District side had their accumulation combed out last week.

Merrick said that nine submarine telephone and telegraph cables just below Highway Bridge will be replaced soon.

Chiang Hurls Last Reserves Into Battle to Protect Hankow

China

ernment has been receiving supplies for defense of the capital at Hankow.

The Canton newspaper Yutwahpao said Japanese aircraft carriers formerly off Swatow, escorted by five destroyers, had taken up positions off the Paracel Islands which were occupied by French military police this month.

Ten Japanese warships and two destroyers were north of the Paracels on the south coast of Hainan Island.

The newspaper said French submarines were active in this area and that "seven French transports were standing by at Hanoi, French Indo-China, ready to transport French troops to the Paracels if necessary."

Eight bombing planes today raided the government airfield at Hankow.

Despite the vigor of the Chinese counter-attacks, foreign military attaches here and in Hankow believed that the Wuhan cities (Wuchang, Hankow and Hanyang)—traditional military heart of China—soon would fall to the encircling Japanese.

Then, it was believed, the Japanese would halt their military operations for a time and make a new "peace drive."

Foreign consuls general in Shanghai told the United Press they had reports the Japanese were considering new international agreements with regard to China and would suggest a "modernization" of the present Nine Power Treaty which is supposed to assure China's territorial integrity.

It was pointed out guarded Japanese statements during the past week have emphasized that Chiang soon "will be reduced to the status of a mere provincial war-lord" and that Japan may consider that he has been sufficiently "crushed" when he is ousted from the Wuhan area.

Eventually, some diplomats suggested, Japan may withdraw to the provinces north of the Yellow River which always have been her real military objective.

The Kwangtung provisional government in Canton said Chinese guerrilas landed on Namoa Island Monday night, taking advantage of withdrawal of part of the Japanese garrison, and gained control of most of the island after brisk fighting in which the chairman of the pro-Japanese government, the chief of police, and other officials were captured and executed.

A Japanese army spokesman revealed the Chinese invasion of Shansi Province starting three months ago had been more successful than heretofore reported. He said some Japanese garrisons were isolated for weeks and that the soldiers were reduced to eating cats and dogs to avoid starvation.

Japan's new offensive, however, had relieved pressure on the beleaguered garrisons in Wensi, Yugcheng and Hotsein. The bulk of the Chinese forces, estimated to total between 150,000 and 200,000, were being driven south and westward across the Yellow River. Japanese forces had occupied Yuanku, in southeast Shansi on the Yellow River, after killing hundreds of Chinese.

The Chinese burned all villages in their line of retreat.

Wallace Urges Subsidies for Wheat Exports

Farm

In the fiscal year just ended, America exported only 100,000,000 bushels or wheat. Wallace figures the United States in the ensuing crop year will have 250,000,000 bushels to place on the world market after allowances for insurance and ever-normal granary reserves.

"The United States would like to stay in the world market on a basis of co-operation with other nations and on a basis that would assure it a fair share of the market," Wallace said.

"We are beginning to think about what might be called an international ever-normal granary. There is a desire on the part of other nations to carry over a larger quantity of wheat in good crop years so they would still have a normal quantity to put on the market in poor crop years.

"The idea really is that the various countries which produce wheat would adjust marketings so as to provide more constant supplies."

Wallace's statement couched an open warning that the United States may resort to wheat export subsidies unless the other nations of the world consent to movement of a larger share of its wheat surplus in the world market.

He said he hoped other countries would not employ practices requiring the United States to resort to subsidies, but "if it is necessary, we are in a better position than any other Nation."

The AAA is empowered to use 30 per cent of customs receipts for export subsidies, a sum estimated at about $144,000,000. But some high Administration officials, notably Secretary of State Cordell Hull, are known to oppose dumping of American wheat abroad as a threat to the progress of reciprocal trade agreements.

Wallace conceded it was a "difficult" problem, that would have to be handled skillfully so as not to upset world trade.

At the same time he said the forthcoming wheat crop loan policy definitely "enters into the picture." He said there would be "more wheat flowing into the world market if loans are made at a low figure." (It has been virtually agreed to make them near farm act minimums.)

Asked if the United States hoped to find an export market for the entire 250,000,000 bushel exportable surplus, Wallace reiterated that what is sought is "a fair share of the world demand." While there are some that hoped to move the entire amount, Wallace said there are "some nations" that would like to see the American supply held from world trade. He suggested some "intermediate" point could be found on the amount of wheat to be marketed.

With the expected announcement of the wheat crop loan today, and the wheat crop insurance program already authorized, the United States has substantially in effect an ever-normal granary program that would enable farmers to hold their grain until prices improve, and pay insurance premiums in good years to guard against losses in poor ones.

Wallace, in effect, proposed that the "fat and lean year" philosophy be applied to the world, to "bring a little more order" into international marketings, and to provide a "constant" world supply.

Although $100,000,000 was made available yesterday for the wheat loan program, it was indicated the ultimate cost may be nearer $130,000,000.

Wallace said that the "carrying charge" on loan wheat will not exceed 7 cents of bushel for the entire period of the loan. This charge will be paid by farmers if the price of wheat goes up, but will be borne by the Government if wheat prices fall.

was married in Elkton was 25 Edison terrace, West Orange, N. J.

Mrs. Crater lived until last March at 40 Fifth avenue here. When eviction proceedings were initiated against her last March she made no defense and her attorney explained that she had no funds.

After Justice Crater disappeared, he was reported seen in many parts of the world, and large sums were spent by the police, his family and newspapers in an attempt to find him.

At last at 9:15 p. m. on August 6, 1937, with the lapse of seven years since he was seen last entering a taxicab outside of the Haas Restaurant, on West Forty-fifth street, a legal presumption existed that he was dead. His wife, after presenting proof of a diligent search, was entitled to ask for the probate of his estate and the payment of his insurance.

Housing

the loan application said construction could start within approximately 10 weeks and could be completed in approximately 15 or 20 months.

The Municipal Court Building, to replace the present dilapidated court structure, will be almost a duplicate of the new Police Court Building and will be located opposite it on Judiciary Square, he said.

The new fire-proof Juvenile Court Building will resemble the Court of Appeals Building and will balance it in Judiciary Square at Fourth and E streets northwest.

The money for Gallinger Hospital will construct a medical building with a 300-bed capacity, remodel the sixth floor of a present building, convert the X-ray division space into operating rooms and enlarge the heating plant.

It was also indicated at the PWA that additional allotments might be made soon from applications the Commissioners have made. Items include $2,750,000 for the National Guard Armory, $2,520,000 for a start on the municipal center, $1,600,000 for improvement of the District Jail, $1,000,000 to modernize and relocate the fire alarm system, $710,755 for sewers, $675,000 for further additions to Gallinger Hospital, and $300,000 for a branch library.

The three projects for which allotments were made yesterday had been submitted to the PWA when the law required that the District repay 70 per cent of the money at the rate of $1,000,000 a year. Legislation last Congress put the District on a parity with the States and requires repayment of only 55 per cent at $300,000 a year.

$10,000,000 Granted D. C.

Under the old PWA program the District had received allotments for construction of a sewage disposal plant, a sanitarium, a hospital building and other projects whose total was $10,000,000.

Two weeks ago Ickes, understood to take a personal interest in alloting PWA money to the District, gave the Commissioners a tongue lashing at a press conference when he found they had sent him only a letter announcing their intentions of applying for funds and not at that time detailed applications.

The Commissioners immediately worked day and night to push detailed applications upon which the allotments yesterday were made and from which the future allotments are expected to be made.

Nathan Straus, in announcing his hope that construction on the proposed $15,000,000 slum-clearance and low-cost housing project here could be started by Thanksgiving, declared he was "very much encouraged" by present progress.

Local Responsibility.

He said the ADA had already submitted a mass of information, and added that "the entire responsibility for progress in the program now lies with the local authority."

He said he would require of the ADA information on actual rentals now paid in Washington slums; detailed information on the type of buildings, layout design and maintenance costs of proposed new buildings and proof that the new buildings could be rented at prices within reach of pocketbooks of the slum dwellers, including a possible subsidy from the USHA.

Ihlder said later in the day that such information would be sent to Straus later in the week.

Straus earmarked $15,000,000 for the ADA on July 1, within 24 hours after receiving an application for $18,146,287. Straus said yesterday he would consider it "very fast work" if the ADA were ready to sign a contract for loan of the money by September 1.

May Limit Eligibles.

Meanwhile, it appeared that two policies of the USHA would limit the families which would be eligible for living in the 3,000 to 3,500 dwelling units the ADA proposes to build on vacant or reclaimed slum areas.

One policy that renters in houses financed by USHA funds must be able to pay rent out of their own incomes would make the city's 11,000 to 12,000 families on relief ineligible. Another limitation is that incomes of families cannot exceed the rent by more than five times, or more than six times in case of large families.

It is estimated there are 20,000 families here living in dwellings considered uninhabitable and which cannot be put into habitable condition.

The program of the ADA is designed to replace these houses with decent dwelling units to be rented at a price within the reach of the "third of the people" who are inadequately housed, fed and clothed.

Cost to Be Low.

Although it is impossible now to tell what will be rents of the proposed housing program, Ihlder expects the new houses to cost less than buildings already constructed by the ADA. They have been constructed at a cost ranging from $850 to $1,100 a room. This cost includes demolition of formerly inhabited alley dwellings.

Rents on the present new buildings range from $6.25 per room per month for a four-room one-family dwelling to $10.45 per room per month for apartment dwellings with central heat, refrigeration and stoves.

Many of the proposed new dwellings are expected to be two-story one-family row houses, which are cheapest to construct and maintain. Cost of vacant land on which many of the houses are expected to be constructed, will be less than land in slum areas reclaimed in the past. This factor will help reduce costs and in turn rents.

DuPont, Raskob To Fight Taxes

By the United Press.

Pierre S. duPont, Delaware industrialist, and John J. Raskob, financier, probably will appeal from a decision by the Board of Tax Appeals which held that stock transactions between them in 1929-30 were not bona fide for tax reduction purposes, Federal attorneys indicated last night.

They estimated Raskob's liability under the decision at $1,000,000 and duPont's at $750,000. Counsel for duPont, however, insisted that his actual liability in the stock transactions is about $256,000 and pointed out that several other issues were involved in the board's decision.

Prices

the institution, and Dr. Horace B. Drury.

Present-day monopolists bend their efforts toward outselling competitors by producing better goods at lower prices in order to obtain mass consumption, it was said.

The report, however, posed the problem of price fixing as one of the major unsolved questions of the times, pointing to the inability of industries to organize effectively for industrial leadership without becoming authoritarian bodies dictating price structures without relation to use and need.

Regimentation Seen.

In considering this question, repeatedly discussed in numerous national forums by former NRA Director Donald R. Richberg, the institute's researchers came to much the same conclusion: that group organizations of industries, such as trade associations, "either keep their activities on the level of the debating society, with no actual control over members, or else they tend toward the path of regimentation . . ."

Trade associations, it was stressed, tread a tightrope over a sea of Federal antitrust restrictions if they do more than disseminate statistical information. Yet, according to the report, the possibilities for "dynomic price-making"—the use of price-fixing as an instrument toward industrial and social stability—can only be fully realized by industrial leadership made effective by bringing it to focus in such points as group organizations.

Thus the report concluded that trade associations, because of inevitable compromise, now are a "trivas held, this is due to the fact that industrial laggards insist that the procession wait for them, and partly to the fact that "even the leader is prone to find such a course attractive."

The authors outlined the situation thus: That if a company established strongly by a low-cost position attempts to press the advantage further, those who lose business and those who may entirely be displaced will express natural resentment, while adverse public opinion and perhaps Government action may be enlisted on their side.

Take Things Easy.

Therefore, the report said, "'political influence, both within the organization and outside, tends to encourage the concern whose growth is based on superior efficiency to take things easy and accept a relatively wide profit from the existing volume of business rather than draw more of the trade into its low-cost orbit."

The investigators stressed that monopolies are broken now from above and below, by the inventive ingenuity of competitors which often make at less cost substitutes which are superior to the original in quality and performance, and by modern merchandising methods.

Citing examples, in a direct reference to the struggle for supremacy in the low-priced automobile field among Ford, Chrysler and General Motors, the study said:

"The battle between the three giants in the automobile field sets the high mark of economically useful competition that our system has thus far presented.

"But the competitive struggle among the leading chemical companies, the great mail order houses, the leading food chains, the principal electric concerns and many others is of the same general order.

"If we could get home-building giants competing with each other, might we not get a similar lowering of prices of basic materials by supplying an assured quantity market which would make possible the long-delayed liaison between low-cost fabrication and cheap materials in that field? Local builders have shown themselves incapable of developing either operative efficiency on the modern industrial plane or the pressure toward mass supply and rock-bottom prices for materials."

This latter point was stressed by President Roosevelt in his monopoly message to Congress on April 29.

The report did not attempt to give a direct solution to the price problem, but strove to clarify the problem and bring it within limits as definite as possible in order to provide a concrete basis for a definite and permanent answer to the vast question.

In outlining the shift from the old cost-plus formula of fixing prices to an advance determination of a price the report lauded the widespread "constructive attack" on the problem, wherein industry "courageously" starts from the consumer's want and his purchasing power and accepts the task of finding a means of satisfying these wants within the limitations of this purchasing power.

In former times, and in many cases today, the report said, the employer, if the price he had computed as necessary failed to maintain full volume of operation, "could protect himself to an extent by shifting the burden to the worker in the form of unemployment.

"But it is becoming increasingly clear that such an answer to the price problem is hardly less satisfactory to the capitalist than to the laborer.

"He finds the cost of unemployment coming back eventually, though indirectly, in new burdens for relief, protection against crime and sickness, and the loss of labor efficiency and morale.

"It comes back directly also not merely in suspension of earnings on capital in the abstract sense but in the form of physical deterioration and technological obsolescence of plant during its idle period.

"In a word, nothing less than continuous capacity operation can fully answer capital's problem—any more than it can answer labor's problem."

Ickes Disciplines City in Lobbying For PWA Funds

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Ickes, PWA Administrator, disciplined the city of Riverside, Calif., yesterday on the ground it engaged a lobbyist to seek PWA funds.

Acting on complaint of a local taxpayers' group, Ickes suspended the city's application for aid in building a sewer system until Mayor William C. Evans shows "satisfactorily" why the city engaged Glenn E. Miller to get the project through PWA and why PWA regulations against such activities "should not be enforced."

Ickes said his investigation showed the city agreed in a formal contract signed by Mayor Evans to pay Miller 1 per cent of any allotment received from PWA. Ickes called "such an arrangement, in my opinion, a misuse of public funds."

3-Million Suit Over Railway's Security Filed

District Court Gets Action by Bondholders of Anacostia Line.

A $3,000,000 suit to recover the value of properties securing a 40-year-old bond issue of the extinct Anacostia & River Railroad was filed against the Capital Transit Co., the Washington Railway & Electric Co. and the Baltimore National Bank, in District court yesterday.

Holders of the bonds, represented by David Fisher, 1629 Columbia road northwest, charged the three firms, as trustees, had withdrawn all security behind the issue.

The petition claimed the assets of the Anacostia & River Railroad were sold to the Washington Railway & Electric Co. for $2,000,000 in 1912, but that this price was never paid, thus depriving the bond issue of security. The only tangible assets left to back up the $3,000,000 worth of bonds, the suit claimed, are 8 miles of unused streetcar track.

Holders of the securities asked that the court set aside the 1913 sale as a violation of the law then governing local railways and that the fair value of the properties on that date be paid to a receiver of the court. They suggested as an alternative that a trust be impressed on the Washington Railway & Electric Co. to meet the bond payments of the Anacostia line.

The bonds are widely held by Washington and Baltimore investors and are currently quoted on the Washington Stock Exchange at 60. The suit was filed through the law firm of Frost, Myers & Towers.

'Life-Death' Plea Wins Leniency For D.C. Speeder

A plea of "life-or-death" won leniency for a speeder in Police Court yesterday.

Warren C. Foster, 4000 Cathedral avenue northwest, pleaded guilty to driving more than 60 miles an hour June 21, but explained he was rushing a stricken friend to the doctor. He told Judge Hobart Newman that Ashby Williams, jr., of Silver Spring, Md., was stricken supposedly with a heart attack at a bridge party in Chevy Chase.

'Popillia Japonica' Wins Freedom to Feast on Washington Roses, Grapevines; Other Bugs—a Beetle and a Bollworm—Invade South.

Bureau of Entomology experts said yesterday they had given up hope of exterminating the Japanese beetle in this section.

"All we can do now is check outgoing vehicles for the beetles so that they are not transported into noninfected areas," an official stated.

So little Popillia Japonica will have a swell time on the grape vines and rose bushes in the District this season, not to mention apple and cherry trees.

More attention, however, is being paid to a new menace to farm crops, the dreaded white-fringed beetle, which has invaded the South, and does his damage below the ground.

Department of Agriculture experts said an intensive campaign is planned to keep the newcomer from this section.

"No there is no definite basis for comparing the destructiveness of white-fringed and the Japanese beetle," Hoyt stated. "The white fringed beetle can do little harm to crops above the ground but he does do considerable damage to underground crops, such as cotton, peanuts, potatoes and sometimes corn."

Another big worry for Federal entomologists is the invasion by the pink bollworm, a native of Egypt, which was introduced into Texas by way of Mexico.

"We already had the boolweevil, but now we have the pink bollworm," Hoyt said, "and in the rainy season the bollweevil is at his best and in the dry season it's the pink bollworm."

Highway Safety Experts Study Signal Problem

Conferees Also Consider Measures to Control Bicycle Traffic.

Problems of erecting signs and signals along the Nation's highways and proposed measures to control the increasing volume of bicycle traffic held attention of the National Conference on Street and Highway Safety at the United States Chamber of Commerce yesterday.

Various types of reflector signs to improve night driving conditions were considered by the group. It was proposed also to effect improvement in route markings to facilitate traffic movement and provide motorists with simplified methods of finding their way.

The committee revising the code covering uniform traffic control devices is headed by E. W. James, of the Bureau of Public Roads. The need for increasing the size of highway markers—described as so small in many instances that drivers have difficulty in seeing them—was stressed by several speakers at yesterday's sessions.

A special committee was appointed to study problems of controlling bicycle traffic and safeguard youngsters who are using city and urban streets in ever-increasing numbers.

Lew Wallace, director of motor vehicles for Iowa, cited the bicycle problem as "acute."

"The bicycle," he said, "is here, there and everywhere. Frankly, it's driving us crazy. We've got to do something on a national scale, or this juvenile juggernaut will chase us off the streets and roads."

Wallace proposed to hold parents directly responsible for actions of their children on the highways. In some cities, he said, bicycles are permitted on sidewalks—increasing the hazards for pedestrians.

Hughes

Thurlow and Harry P. Connor, his navigators; Stoddart and Edward Lund, the engineering officer.

The beards covered any signs of fatigue which might have marked the faces of the five men who have been on the ground only 19 hours and 50 minutes since they left New York City last Sunday night.

The men were cheerful as they awaited the refueling and tests of the plane motors.

Greeted by Mrs. Post.

Mrs. Wiley Post, widow of the man whose record Hughes is seeking to break, came up to greet the fliers.

She said she was glad for the opportunity to congratulate the group on the success of their flight so far.

Mrs. Post was in Fairbanks expecting to attend the dedication of a memorial to her husband and Will Rogers, killed near Point Barrow on August 15, 1935 during an Arctic flight.

There was a crowd of several thousand persons assembled along the edges of this modern airport near the Arctic Circle.

As the preparations for the take-off were completed, Hughes and his companions climbed into their plane for what they expected would be the last lap of their journey around the world.

The heavily loaded plane soared into the air and headed southeastward toward New York.

A weather report from Edmonton said conditions over the Canadian Northwest generally were favorable. Visibility was 15 miles at Fort Nelson, Fort St. John and Edmonton.

Streaking over the barren Arctic wastes, the twin-motored Lockheed completed the next-to-last scheduled leg in 12 hours, 19 minutes—nearly three days ahead of the pace set by the late Wiley Post in his record flight in 1933.

Ahead lay a 3,794-mile flight down over the Canadian wilds toward New York, which Hughes will try to make in a single hop.

Hughes' giant monoplane droned over Fairbanks Airport at 2:15 (Fairbanks time), circled the field and made a graceful landing as a welcoming crowd of several hundred, including Mrs. Wiley Post, roared an ovation.

Tired But Cheerful.

Seven and a half hours after Hughes left Yakutsk at 8:01 a. m. (Eastern daylight time), his plane was over Bering Sea—the strip of water that separates Asia and America. Shortly afterward Hughes and his companions thundered past Teller, Alaska, 530 miles west of Fairbanks, crossing American soil three days after they took off from Floyd Bennett Field, New York, at 6:20 p. m. last Sunday.

Hughes was the first out of the plane after it came to a halt. He appeared tired but was in excellent humor. The first to reach his side with a handshake of welcome was Joe Crosson, noted Alaska mercy flier.

Crosson flew the bodies of Wiley Post and Will Rogers from Point Barrow following their fatal crash in August, 1935. Post's widow was in Fairbanks today to attend dedication of a monument commemorating her husband and Rogers.

The crowd, impatient to reach the plane's side, almost broke through barriers before the craft came to a halt. A field announcer begged welcomers to "stay away, please, until the plane has stopped."

Following the Arctic Circle from Siberia, Hughes shot his plane over Bering Strait from Cape Dezhneva, the eastern tip of Asia, and sighted Cape Prince of Wales on the Alaska shore, 600 miles from Fairbanks, at 11:30 a. m. Fairbanks time.

Hughes' elapsed time since he left New York at 6:20 p. m. (E. S. T.) Sunday night, was three days, 58 minutes, covering 11,330 miles from New York by way of Paris, Moscow and Omsk, Siberia.

He was two days, 22 hours and 34 minutes ahead of Post's time at the same point. Post had covered 11,802 miles in five days, 23 hours, 32 minutes when he reached Fairbanks at 4:42 p. m. on July 21, 1933.

Hughes, setting a blistering pace as he sped eastward from Yakutsk—his last Asiatic stopping point—was 903 miles from Fairbanks at 9:33 a. m., Fairbanks time (2:35 p. m., E. S. T.).

Radio Clocks Progress.

Radio stations from Los Angeles to Anchorage, Alaska, clocked the progress of the plane regularly as it skimmed over the rugged glacier peaks of Northern Siberia and out toward the 100-mile stretch of water lying between the Asiatic mainland and Alaska.

Flying at better than 210 miles an hour, it had sped on perfect schedule from Yakutsk, 2,457 miles west of here, and by midmorning, Fairbanks time, had traveled 1,554 miles over the worst stretch of its 14,748-mile journey from New York to New York.

An Army radio station at Seattle, Wash., picked up Hughes' signals as he roared away from the Siberian coast over the Gulf of Anadyr, and shortly afterward the Coast Guard cutter Spencer, in the Bering Sea, reported the plane's position.

The young Texas millionaire sent his plane droning into the Arctic night from Yakutsk at 2:01 a. m., Fairbanks time (7:01 a. m., E. S. T.).

Crosses Date-Line.

It was just after supper-time Thursday at Yakutsk—9:01 p. m.—but when Hughes reached Fairbanks it was Wednesday, since the international dateline lay in his route over the 100-mile strip of the Bering Sea between the Asiatic and American continents.

At Fairbanks he had approximately 3,700 miles to go, and his flight headquarters in New York said he probably would make the jump in one hop, giving him an even chance of making the trip around the globe in less than four days. He left Floyd Bennett Airport, New York at 6:20 p. m., E. S. T., Sunday.

Field crews waited at the airport here to refuel the big Lockheed, check the engines and make any necessary replacements. Hughes hoped to be in the air again two hours after his arrival.

The Hughes plane was in steady communication with his radio station on the Pacific Coast from midmorning, New York time, as he climbed steadily over the rugged terrain of northern Siberia, skirting the lower Arctic on his way to the eastern tip of the Asiatic Continent.

Weather Favorable.

The area over which he traveled was the worst of his flight, but fair weather conditions enabled him to keep a pace of 200 to 210 miles an hour, as he scaled the treacherous Verkhoyansk Mountains, 400 miles east of Yakutsk, and for the first time established contact with the Pacific Coast of America.

At 8:22 a. m. (Eastern standard time), the United States Government radio station at Anchorage, Alaska, picked up his signals, reporting the plane at latitude 64 north, longitude 137.05 east, flying at 6,200 feet This is just beyond the Verkhoyansk range.

From there he headed due east, reporting at regular intervals as the plane streaked over barren mountains, less than 200 miles below the Arctic Circle, without an established town for more than 1,000 miles.

A few storms were reported in his course, but Hughes lifted his plane to 10,000 feet and raced for the Gulf of Anadyr, his jump-off point for the stretch of ocean to the Alaska coast.

Lund to Marry Soon.

Ed Lund, flight expert and fourth member of the crew, is a bachelor, but expects to remedy that situation as soon as he returns to New York, where his engagement to Elinore Hoagland, 19-year-old Brooklyn girl, is to be announced.

At 11:45 p. m., E. S. T., the giant twin-motored plane was skimming over the Russkii Mountains, a formidable range of glacial peaks forming the last major obstacle on the hop from Yakutsk to Alaska.

The mountains are more than 1,000 miles east of Yakutsk, and the plane was roaring along at 210 miles an hour and picking up speed as its capacity load of 1,750 gallons of gasoline taken on at Yakutsk was consumed.

Hughes' course from there lay over the winding Anadyr River Valley, one of the most desolate stretches in northern Siberia, emptying into the Gulf of Anadyr.

The last 500-mile stretch, from Nome to Fairbanks, was over regular air routes along the Yukon and Tanana River valleys.

Although none of the flying crew had enjoyed a regular sleep since they left Paris Monday night—when Hughes snatched two hours of rest and his flying mates a few minutes longer—they appeared cheerful as they flashed regular messages from the plane.

At one point Stoddart announced the radio channel would be quiet for an hour, as he was about to "take a nap." It was the first time since the take-off that he had announced any interval for sleep.

A comparison of Hughes' flight and that of the late Wiley Post, who established the around-the-world record of 7 days, 18 hours, 49 minutes, shows that Hughes has nearly doubled Post's speed as far as Fairbanks.

At Fairbanks Post had flown 11,802 miles in 5 days, 23 hours, 32 minutes, leaving New York July 15, 1933, at 4:10 p. m. and arriving here at 3:42 p. m. (E. S. T) on July 21. His actual flying time was 92 hours, 59 minutes, at an average speed of 126 miles an hour.

Hughes had averaged 210 miles an hour as far as Yakutsk, flying 8,873 miles in 42 hours, 19 minutes actual flying time.

Hughes also spent far less time on the ground between hops than Post—18 hours, 32 minutes all told, as against Post's total ground time of 50 hours, 43 minutes. Post's route, slightly to the south of Hughes' course, was slightly longer across Siberia, but was shorter from New York to Moscow.

Hughes and his mates made the long stretch from Omsk, Siberia, where he landed yesterday from Moscow, to Yakutsk, the so-called "Metropolis of the Arctic," far up on the Lena River, in 10 hours, 31 minutes, crossing 2,177 miles of desolate forests and mountains.

He took off from Omsk at 4:37 a. m., Thursday, Omsk time (5:37 p. m., Tuesday, Eastern standard time) and landed at Yakutsk at 6:08 p. m., Yakutsk time. At this point he was only 2 days, 9 hours and 48 minutes out of New York, and was well over half way around the world.

Roosevelt

Leaving Carlin, the President sped toward California, where he planned to speak at the San Francisco exposition grounds tomorrow, and perhaps say a good word or two for Senator McAdoo, one of his staunch supporters.

The President told his Carlin station audience he thought the country was getting more "water conscious." Better use of water in Nevada, he said, should make it possible for the State to support a larger population.

"We in Washington are not forgetting your State and your problems," he said.

The President left the rear platform before the train pulled out, telling his listeners "I've got some work to do." This consisted, he explained, of getting in touch with Washington officials by telephone.

After Mr. Roosevelt embarks for his Pacific cruise at San Diego Saturday, he asserted, he would be "in five-minute touch with Washington by telephone."

He said it was necessary that he keep close communication with the Capital because of the numerous "problems all over the country and also the problem of foreign affairs."

Later the President told a Reno, Nev., audience that "from seeing things today from the train, there is a certain amount of prosperity in this State."

Crowds greeted the President at Reno and at Sparks, three miles east of Reno. At Sparks, the President introduced McCarran, Gov. Kirman, Hilliard, Representative James G. Scrugham and Commissioner Allen of the District of Columbia.

At Imlay, Nev., the President mentioned both McCarran and Hilliard.

"Your Senator," he remarked in a discussion of his forthcoming Pacific Ocean fishing cruise, "has given me some fine Nevada trout."

"Oh, I forgot. I want to introduce Mr. (John) Boettiger and Mrs. Boettiger and Brother Hilliard."

At one point in his talk, Mr. Roosevelt reiterated that he was "water-minded," bringing a cheer from the crowd. But, he added, he was "not a strict prohibitionist." And the crowd roared.

McCarran told newsmen his opposition to such major Administration proposals as the court and Government reorganization bills apparently was helping rather than hindering his campaign for renomination.

Referring to the Oklahoma Democratic primary yesterday in which Senator Elmer Thomas beat a field of three, McCarran ventured the opinion Thomas would have been renominated even if Mr. Roosevelt had not spoken favorably of him while in Oklahoma.

Pointing out that Mr. Roosevelt had given Senator Barkley, majority leader, a strong indorsement for renomination in the latter's Kentucky primary fight, McCarran expressed the view this would not upset normal Kentucky political trends.

President Roosevelt made no platform appearances in Utah, where Gov. Henry H. Blood assured him that incumbent Democrats were "safe."

Tomorrow afternoon the President will review all available units of the United States Fleet, assembled in San Francisco Bay. Some 80 fighting craft will participate.

At Imlay, Gov. Richard Kirman and Representative Scrugham, Nevada's only Congressman, boarded the special train.

Traverse City, Minn., July 13 (AP). Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, said in an address tonight that President Roosevelt should call the Senate into special session before October 1 to act on his nominee to succeed the late Justice Benjamin Cardozo of the Supreme Court.

Vandenberg pointed out that the Supreme Court will reconvene in October but that the Senate ordinarily would not be in session until January, then added that "the country can stand a few mistakes in its political departments but cannot stand many mistakes in its judicial departments."

Get Wise to Constipation!

When you're constipated, it's a great temptation to be satisfied with quick relief. But physics may become a habit. And they don't keep constipation from returning. It's so much better to get at the cause of the trouble.

If you eat what most people do, chances are the only thing the matter is you don't get enough "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean how much you eat. It means a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines and helps a bowel movement.

What to do? Eat a little Kellogg's All-Bran for breakfast every day and drink plenty of water. This crunchy toasted cereal is not only rich in "bulk"—it also contains the natural intestinal tonic, vitamin B_1. All-Bran is made by Kellogg in Battle Creek. Sold by every grocer.

Barbara Drops 'Threat' Charge Against Count

Quick Separation Trial in Copenhagen Seen After Dismissal.

By the Associated Press.

London, July 13.—The former Barbara Hutton hinted by proxy today at a possible quick shift to a Copenhagen separation court for a break from her titled Danish husband, who promised to stay away from her.

Her costly legal battery dropped the charge the Woolworth heiress' husband, Count Court Haugwitz-Reventlow, had threatened her. In a brief hearing at which the charge was dismissed, Sir Patrick Hastings, the countess' attorney, said any separation proceedings would be subject to Danish law.

Other points cleared up were:

The "gentleman in London" the count was accused of threatening to shoot "like a dog" did not meet the countess until after she and her husband had quarreled.

The count admitted through counsel he may have intimated he thought the countess' London mansion was not the proper house for their 2-year-old son, Lance, to be brought up in, but explained he meant merely that "wealthy surroundings were not suitable for the child."

The countess' attorneys accepted an explanation that what they had considered were threats were spoken "in the stress of emotion."

Sally Rand Denies Inflicting Mayhem On Camera Public

Los Angeles, July 13 (AP).—Whether Sally Rand, of bubble and fan, did "bite and scratch and generally behave like a wild woman," will be the subject of a hearing next Monday.

It developed from a theater altercation in which films of two candid camera fans were destroyed.

Hazel Drain, 22, announced through her attorney, Willedd Andrews, today that she would sue for damages. Then she and her escort, Ray Stanford, 26, appeared at the city prosecutor's office seeking a complaint against Sally charging battery and malicious mischief.

Says Miss Rand: "I never allow my picture to be taken while dancing. As I got through the act, I saw a man take a roll of films out of the camera. I put on a robe and went down where they were sitting in front-row seats. We went up the aisle and into the cloakroom and finally I persuaded him to expose the films. I didn't bite or scratch anyone."

Wave Kills Five, Imperils Score on Lake Michigan

Holland, Mich., July 13 (AP).—A wave described by Coast Guardsmen as the biggest they ever had seen took the lives of five persons along the eastern shore of Lake Michigan today.

At Ottawa Beach, near Holland, the undertow swept two young women and a man out into the lake. They were identified as Katherine Schutt, 19, of Beaverdam, Mich.; Ruth Riksen, 19, of Kansas City, Mo., and Herbert Bowers, 34, of Grand Rapids, Mich.

John D. Lent, jr., 20, of Peru, Ill., drowned at Pentwater, north of here, when the waves capsized his canoe.

The coast guardsmen said waves 8 to 10 feet high swept the shore line.

Elliott Roosevelt Denies Plans to Run for Office

Fort Worth, July 13 (AP).—Elliott Roosevelt, son of the President, used one sentence here today to deny political rumors out of Washington, D. C., that he might be a candidate for United States Senator or Governor in 1940.

"I do not plan to run for any political office now, two years from now or four years hence," said Roosevelt.

Tydings Opens War on 'Purge' Appointments

Tydings

of the Federal Housing Administration, Representative Lewis, Tydings' opponent in the Senate race, slashed at the debonair "Squire of Oak Hill" as a "voting Republican."

"Little Davey" told the voters in a radio address that Tydings' record in Congress was exactly comparable to that of Senator Vandenberg, of Michigan, Republican leader, who is the chief opposition critic of Roosevelt policies.

Quotes His "Nays."

Lewis said: "On ten major New Deal measures Tydings and Vandenberg voted alike. Both registered 'nays' on farm relief, Muscle Shoals, the NRA, settlement of labor disputes, public utilities holding company act, soil conservation; work relief program and the conference report on flood control.

"Need we wonder that Senator Vandenberg has announced he will come into Maryland to support Mr. Tydings if he receives the Democratic Senatorial nomination?"

Tydings did not reveal the names of any Senators pledged to support him in opposing confirmation of any New Deal appointees "who take the place of the victims who did not 'vote right.'"

Tydings attacked the "political terrorism" which he said had been manifested in reports that Maryland officials "whose only offense is their support of myself" have been "marked for political execution."

"Sufficient Assurances."

He said:

"I make to the people of Maryland a solemn pledge that this political purge shall not succeed. The Constitution provides that appointments of the sort now under attack shall be made by the President by and with the consent of the Senate. No appointee can take office until the Senate confirms him and I have already received sufficient assurances from my fellow Senators that they will join me in opposing confirmation of such new appointees."

He charged:

"One Robert Hobart, contact man for Lewis, recently went to Havre De Grace, my home town, and although he had no connections with the Postoffice Department, Hobart entered the Havre De Grace postoffice as though he were a Federal officer, conferred at length with the personnel there and with my political opponents in town, telling them it was desired to humiliate me and asking the name of a candidate to replace the postmaster of my appointment, a candidate who should be politically antagonistic to me."

Harlan Man Succumbs To Gunshot Wounds

Harlan, Ky., July 13 (U.P.).—Charley Reno, 40, died in Harlan County Hospital tonight of gunshot wounds allegedly inflicted July 5 by Lee Fleenor, 34, former deputy sheriff and a defendant in the Harlan County coal conspiracy trial.

2 Girls Admit Attack on Farmer In Md., Say Escort Killed Him

Murder

neighbors reported. He was said to have had approximately $1,000 in his pockets at the time. The eccentric farmer was robbed before he was killed, investigators said.

Stinnett reportedly named Mrs. Bierner as Gantt's slayer, insisting she fired the shots. Both women, however, blamed Stinnett for the crime, Perry told Calvert County authorities here.

The Abell girl is the estranged wife of Raymond Abell, a farmer of near here. She is the mother of a 3-year-old child.

"We Wanted the Money."

Officials in Fredericksburg said she admitted all three had planned to kill Gantt.

"Stinnett fired the shots," she told officials while she awaited removal to Prince Frederick. "He pumped four bullets into Gantt's body when the old man was looking the other way."

She added Stinnett used the farmer's own gun.

"I've known Gantt about five year," she was quoted as saying.

"We all knew he carried a big roll on him, and we wanted the money—yes, we wanted the money bad."

They were arrested at Fairview Beach, Va., after several futile attempts to cash checks bearing Gantt's name. A storekeeper called police. State Policeman R. A. Simms was sent to investigate and took the three into custody.

He said only a small amount of cash was found in their possession, but several checks signed by Gantt was taken from them. The suspects told Simms, he reported, they spent the night on the beach after rowing across the river.

Stinnett said he had formerly been employed by Gantt and both women admitted knowing him, Virginia authorities stated. They said—according to reports from Fredericksburg—they went to the elderly farmer's home Monday and started drinking. The brawl in which Gantt was killed occurred some time Monday night and the three fled in his car, according to Fredericksburg police.

Robbery Confessed.

Chief Perry told authorities here that Stinnett admitted he and his two companions robbed Gantt. They threw his wallet overboard while crossing the river, according to Perry's report.

The trio were questioned in Washington tonight in the Franklin Park Hotel apartment of Dr. Richard Rosenberg, deputy coroner of the District, who helped in the recent Lewis murder case at North Beach near Prince Frederick.

At the request of State's Attorney Arthur Dowell, Dr. Rosenberg heard Maryland State police officers question the trio, and later discussed with Dowell evidence in the case. The trio were in Washington nearly an hour, en route from Fredericksburg to Prince Frederick, in custody of Sergt. John Kries, and three other Maryland State police officers.

When last seen, Gantt was reported to have been carrying more than $1,000 in a paper sack. This sack was found near his body, police said, but it contained only $3, a gold watch, a gold ring, some cigarettes and a box of talcum powder.

The slain man was known as one of the most prosperous farmers in this section. He owned property near Lusby and at Parkers Creek in addition to his acreage at Port Republic.

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES

This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.

Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

An excess of acids or poisons in your blood, when due to functional kidney disorders, may be the cause of nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills. Adv.

Brown's Ouster Urged to Hazen By Communists

Delegation Charges 59 Have Been Killed by D.C. Police Officers.

A delegation of Washington Communists yesterday called on Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen and demanded the removal of Maj. Ernest W. Brown as superintendent of police.

They charged that under his administration the police have been brutal to prisoners, especially colored, and that 59 persons have been killed by police since he took office. The Metropolitan Police Department later announced that only 31 had been killed since Brown took office.

"Maj. Brown is unable to control his own men," said Martin Chancey, secretary of the Washington Communist organization.

Ask Pension for Widow.

The delegation of 25 also demanded a pension for Mrs. Wallace McKnight, widow of the colored man killed by a policeman at Thomas circle last month. They hinted that if the pension were granted the widow might drop her plan to make a claim of $100,000 damages in the courts.

Complaint also was made that Maj. Brown refused to permit them to carry coffins in a parade along U street last week in protest against alleged police brutality.

Commissioner Hazen listened to all the complaints, but stated later he had no comment to make.

Police Taunted.

Meanwhile, it developed in Police Court yesterday that a colored woman being arrested by Thirteenth Precinct officers had taunted them and later explained that she wanted them "to drag me out of the house so that we'd have another case of police brutality."

The woman was Rachel Harper, of 1801 Wiltberger street northwest. She was arrested Monday by Policemen E. D. Alber and T. V. Slominski, charged with grand larceny, assault and destroying private property. She was held under $1,000 bond on the larceny charge by Police Court Judge Edward Curran. She demanded a jury trial on the other charges.

For her disorderly conduct while the police were attempting to arrest her, however, she was sentenced to a $25 fine or 25 days in jail.

Man Caught Here Returned to N. Y. For Slaying Trial

Benjamin Ertel, 24, wanted in New York as the indicted slayer of Detective Michael J. Foley, was extradited to that city yesterday.

Two New York detectives hustled the diminutive Ertel away before he had a chance to apply for an appeal.

According to the indictment, Ertel and six others held up a New York restaurant in April, 1937. A shooting affray developed when police arrived, and Foley was killed. Five of the hold-up men were arrested on the spot but Ertel escaped. Those caught then have been sentenced to electrocution.

Ertel was found living in an L street rooming house under the alias of Jack Barry. He had married a young woman who knew nothing of his past.

9 Million Allotted For Power Plants

PWA Administrator Ickes conditionally allotted $9,527,995 yesterday for 21 public power projects which he has designated as competitive. To receive this money, municipalities concerned must comply with the power policy Ickes announced Friday.

The conditional loans amount to $2,698,000, and the grants to $6,829,995. The largest was an allotment of $2,770,000 for a steam electric generating plant and distribution system for San Antonio, Tex.

Ickes also announced PWA grants for 27 non-Federal projects involving $4,666,362 in 14 States and the District.

Convention Beats Control of Power

Albany, July 13 (U.P.).—The Constitutional Convention Public Utilities Committee defeated today a proposed amendment giving the State complete control of its water-power resources.

The amendment, offered by Supreme Court Justice Charles Poletti, New York City Democrat, was killed by vote of 9 to 2.

The committee's action came after Poletti, in a vain effort to meet objections, had offered an amendment which would specifically name the Niagara and St. Lawrence rivers.

Undersecretary of State A. A. Berle, who has been seeking a St. Lawrence waterway treaty with Canada, told the committee the Federal Government was ready to appropriate sufficient funds for development of the Niagara and St. Lawrence.

This Is How the Weatherman Does It

Heat Experts Say 92 Yesterday But Maybe It Was 100—or 107

Meteorology Is Kept Plenty Scientific in Sheltered Coop on Roof, But Guy on the Street Still Doesn't Know How Hot It Was.

The nice thing about working at the Weather Bureau is that you can talk about the heat without loafing on the job.

According to R. H. Weightman, meteorologist and forecaster, his associates discuss the weather more frequently than anyone else in Washington. Also, they're among the few people who understand what they're talking about when they say "It's not the heat, it's the you-know-what."

They can look at a gadget called a hygrograph, which measures relative humidity, and at something else called an anemometer, which traces wind velocity, and then tell you you are perspiring because of too little evaporation and too much condensation. Your only retort to such erudition is to point out that all the graphs and meters in the world don't prevent them from perspiring, too.

Doubts Thermometer There.

It's doubtful if there's a real honest-to-goodness old-fashioned thermometer in the entire Weather Bureau. (Anyone who doesn't believe this can look for himself at the building at Twenty-fourth and M street northwest.)

The magic instrument which produces the hour-by-hour temperature readings is a thermoscope, which works by electricity. The thermograph which records the changes in temperature operates by the expansion and contraction of alcohol.

The only mercury in sight is that which is responsible for the high-low readings. Even that doesn't work like the mercury thermometer outside your back door. The silvery ribbon in the maximum thermometer can only move upward and comes to a standstill when the maximum is reached. Its companion, the minimum, can only move down, so its position in the morning represents the lowest temperature reached during the preceding night.

Measure "Air Temperature."

Bureau officials admit frankly all these gadgets measure "air temperature" rather than the weather in the street. They are housed in a "shelter," a rectangular coop on the building's roof, towering about 60 feet above the ground.

Here, according to Observer P. R. Jones, the air is protected from the sun and allowed to circulate freely. A thermometer reading secured under such ideal conditions can be compared with readings obtained in other parts of the country under the same conditions.

Thus, meteorology is kept on a scientific plane and the man in the street never really knows how hot he really is. Yesterday the maximum temperature was 92 in the shelter and probably every other place 60 feet above the ground, in the shade and fanned by a gentle breeze.

In the street, however, it may have been anywhere from 100 to 107, Jones said.

Conscious of Duty.

The Weather Bureau is acutely conscious of its duty toward the public. A telephone call to DUpont 6300 may result in the postponement of the White House garden reception scheduled for that afternoon or persuade an engineer at Conowingo to let some extra water over the dam for hydroelectric purposes.

A canning concern in Pittsburgh calls frequently to ask when the tomato harvest may be expected. Sometimes a bride-to-be calls in April to ask if the sun will shine for her wedding September 10.

One time an irate police sergeant gave Forecaster Weightman the dickens because the predicted "showers" developed into a steady rainfall and his men had gone out without their raincoats.

The Weather Bureau just can't get away from the weather. The chief of the bureau once entered an agreement with his fellow members at the Cosmos Club that the first to talk shop would foot the dinner bill for the others.

Next meeting he said cheerfully, "Good afternoon!" He paid the bill.

'Big Three' Plan For Refugees of Reich Indorsed

Small Nations, Except Colombia, Accept Provisions for Permanent Body.

By the United Press.

Evian, France, July 13.—The small nations of the International Refugee Conference tonight approved the plan of the United States, Britain and France to seek orderly emigration of racial, religious and political outcasts to new homes across the sea.

One by one, Latin-American and small European nations accepted provisionally the resolution embodying a new, permanent refugee organization. It will be voted upon formally Friday, but tonight only the Colombian delegation was still awaiting instructions from its government.

Some of the Latin-American republics were worried about strong phrases at which Germany might take offense, especially the demand that Germany permit involuntary emigrants to take their property with them. Delegates of the "Big Three" powers, however, insisted the clause be retained and said only minor alterations were made.

The Latin-American delegates were particularly concerned with the proposal by the "Big Three" that the permanent committee, to be set up in London August 1, should try to help persons who want to leave the country of their origin as well as those who already have fled.

This proposal, according to the delegates from the small powers, is viewed as an interference with the Reich's internal affairs, and may lead to diplomatic controversies between Germany and the permanent committee.

Many delegates expressed concern over the use of such phrases as "forced migration," and the outline of the director's tasks—to "undertake negotiations to improve the present conditions of chaotic exodus and replace them with conditions of orderly emigration."

The statement that countries which receive refugees "are entitled to expect that the country of origin will make its contribution by enabling involuntary emigrants to take with them their property and possessions and emigrate in an orderly manner," was also viewed as a potential trouble-maker.

Sportsman Takes Life Sentence in 'Coffin' Murder

Northampton, Mass., July 13 (U.P.). The "cement coffin" murder case reached an abrupt end today when John Paul Bathelt, jr., 26-year-old Park avenue, New York, sportsman, pleaded guilty to second-degree murder and was sentenced to life imprisonment.

Bathelt's motive in the slaying of a race-track associate, Charles Morris, 48, may never be disclosed. He reportedly accepted the second-degree penalty rather than stand trial on the first-degree murder indictments returned against him yesterday.

It was theorized he killed the tipster and horse trader over racing bets. It was known also that by Morris' death he profited about $1,450. He received $755 from the victims' bank savings when a default was entered against Morris in a court suit, and later sold Morris' automobile for $700.

Nathaniel Kidder Dies.

Boston, July 13 (AP).—Nathaniel Thayer Kidder, 77, philanthropist and son of Henry P. Kidder, founder of the Boston investment banking house of Kidder, Peabody & Co., died today after a three months' illness.

Sigrid Gurie Divorced In 9-Minute Hearing

Los Angeles, July 13 (AP).—Blue-eyed Sigrid Gurie, film actress, won a divorce today in a nine-minute session, in which she told the judge "my husband slapped me, threatened to thrash me, and said he would lock me out of the house."

D. C. Lover Died Protecting Her, Divorcee Asserts

Prescott, Ariz., July 13.—Odessa Webb, 27-year-old brunette, described from the witness stand in Superior Court here today a fight over her affections which resulted in the death of Marcus Jay Lawrence, wealthy former resident of Washington, D. C., at the trial of Ernesto Lira, Prescott sportsman, for murder.

Mrs. Webb, first defense witness after the State rested its case, admitted she lived with Lira as his wife for five years and was divorced from her husband two years ago.

She also admitted being in bed with Lawrence in Lira's home here the morning of May 14 when Lira walked in. He beat both of them severely, she testified, though Lawrence tried to defend her. Lawrence died of his injuries a few hours later.

One of the final State witnesses was Bruce Brockett, partner of Lawrence in the ownership of a guest ranch near here. He testified that at the time of Lawrence's death he was trying to get him "out of the hands of a bunch of racketeers here in Prescott who were trying to 'take him.'"

Brockett said he tried to persuade Lawrence to stop associating with Lira, Mrs. Webb and George Voun, of Prescott, with whom he had been drinking and gambling after separating from his wife, Jane Stout Lawrence. At the time of Lawrence's death she was suing him for divorce.

Farley Praises Sen. Pope Loyalty

Sun Valley, Idaho, July 13 (AP).—Postmaster General Farley, the Democratic National Chairman, said today he did not know of any member of the Senate who had "been more loyal to the Administration," than Senator James P. Pope of Idaho.

At the same time he declared he was not taking part in any State primary campaign. Pope is opposed in the August 9 primary for the Democratic nomination by Representative D. Worth Clark.

2 Bus Firms Agree on Route For Arlington

Overlapping Lines Would Be Eliminated by Action.

Approval of an agreement between competing bus companies in Arlington to change certain routes and thus eliminate overlapping of service was asked of the Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday.

The Washington, Virginia & Maryland Coach Co., Inc., the Arnold interests and the Arlington & Fairfax Transportation Co. filed applications to have the agreements sanctioned.

Approval of the I. C. C. is subject also to approval of the Virginia Corporation Commission, the applications pointed out. It is believed the I. C .C. will approve the agreement.

The Arlington & Fairfax Co. will transfer to Arnold its operating rights over Washington boulevard between Glebe road and Falls Church.

Arnold also will be allowed to operate exclusively over Glebe road and Pershing drive to Sixteenth street south, and over Sixteenth street south to Quincy street. The A. & F. will withdraw its application for extension of operations over Glebe road from Pershing drive to Wilson boulevard, and will eliminate that portion of an extension applied for south of Lee boulevard, and on South Highland street between Lee boulevard and Seventh street south.

In turn, the Arnold concern will abandon its present route over North Irving street, between Lee and Wilson boulevards, and will not pick up passengers at Courthouse road nor at any point between Courthouse road, Lee boulevard and Fort Myer drive. At the same time it will reserve the right to take passengers at Fort Myer drive and east of it and west of Courthouse road.

Any extension of service north of Washington boulevard will not be opposed by the Arlington & Fairfax.

Ruling Gives Greenbelt Citizens Vote

Greenbelt citizens yesterday won the right to vote in Maryland on grounds denial of franchise rights to the community would be "taxation without representation."

In a formal ruling delivered to Brice Bowie, court clerk of Prince Georges County, by Attorney General Herbert O'Conor, it was declared that although Greenbelt residents rent directly or indirectly from the Federal Government and live on Federal property, they are governed by State and local laws and pay State and local taxes.

"Town officers take an oath to support the Maryland constitution," O'Conor stated, "and while most of Greenbelt's population comes from other States, the people have declared their intention to vote in Maryland."

"It seems inconceivable," O'Conor added, "that this State should accept taxes from the residents of Greenbelt and yet deny them the right to vote in State and county elections so as to express their views on taxes and other matters. This, indeed, would be taxation without representation."

Mixing Politics With Trade.

Announcement from Berlin of the complete suspension of purchases from Brazil indicates how completely the conduct of foreign trade has become subject to state control in Germany. The theory that foreign trade is a refined system of barter, arising out of differences in the comparative production costs of exchange products, no longer corresponds to the facts. The control over commerce and industry exercised by totalitarian governments such as Germany, Italy and Russia establishes a link between trade and politics, making it possible to grant or withhold trading privileges as a mark of political favor or of disapproval, as the case may be.

Consequently when Germany decrees cessation of trading with Brazil, following steps taken by the Brazilian government to curb and regulate the political and cultural activities of German residents, the move is naturally assumed to be retaliatory.

However, the Brazilians apparently made the first move leading to the German action when the Banco de Brazil stopped buying German clearing marks. These blocked domestic marks represent credits or balances acquired by Brazilian exporters through sales to Germany. As they can only be used to purchase German products, it follows that an excess of exports to Germany from Brazil results in a piling up of blocked marks.

According to report the central bank of Brazil, which has been financing excess sales of Brazilian products by agreeing to take over these blocked marks, has balked and refused to continue buying. Germany, presumably as a means of forcing reconsideration of this decision, now threatens a trade boycott. While political tension is possibly partly responsible for the situation that has developed, it is basically due to the extraordinary and complicated system of exchange controls set up by Germany as a result of her shortage of foreign exchange.

Foreign trade, once a refined system of barter, has in many cases degenerated into a crude system of exchange of goods against goods. Countries buying more from than they sell to certain other countries exert pressure to force a more nearly equal balance of imports and exports. Sometimes it is impossible to say whether economic necessity is responsible for such pressure, or whether political motives are uppermost. But in either case, the result is to increase international political tension and intensify trade rivalries.

The Weapon Of Exposure.

Fifteen years ago, when the Ku Klux Klan was on the march, the New York Legislature enacted a law to combat it. With certain exceptions this law required every organization making an oath a condition of membership to file with the State authorities a sworn copy of its regulations, oath of membership and a roster of its members and officers.

Soon afterwards the K. K. K. faded from the picture in the Empire State, a development no doubt hastened by the fact that this law threatened to remove from the Klan the cloak of secrecy without which it could not effectively operate. Until this year the law in question was never invoked.

It remained on the statute books, however, and has now been applied with drastic force against an imported imitation of the Klan. The German-American Settlement League, operating a camp for American Nazi sympathizers, and its six incorporators were on Tuesday found guilty of violating this statute by a Long Island jury. The judge imposed a heavy fine on the organization, in addition to individual fines on the six defendants, and ordered the league president to jail for one year.

The severity of the sentence was probably as much the result of the efforts of the defendants to use the courtroom as a forum for the airing of extreme Nazi views as of their violation of the statute as such. The presiding judge declared himself so shocked by what was said at the trial that he ordered preparation of a copy of the record in the case to be forwarded to the "proper Federal authorities" for investigation.

In any event the people of New York, who have been increasingly alarmed by organized Nazi activities, now find at hand a weapon of defense which contravenes no civil liberties. By complying with the law the Nazi organizations, like those of the Communist camps, can continue to operate. But if the law is complied with, such organizations will be compelled to reveal facts that might prove most embarrassing to their members.

The fire lit in New York 15 years ago to smoke out a native organization devoted to the propagation of intolerance has now singed the feathers of a hyphenate body, which also has intolerance blazoned on its banners. Perhaps other States will enact similar measures. Had there been such a law in Alabama, for instance, it would not have required effort worthy of a Pulitzer prize to dispel the carefully shrouded mystery regarding the Klan affiliations of Mr. Justice Black.

Misleading Budget Statements.

In his January budget message President Roosevelt referred to the difficulty of estimating receipts and expenditures months before the advent of a new fiscal year. He especially stressed the unreliability of estimates of tax receipts, pointing out that the "Treasury's figures of necessity are based on a prophecy of business conditions beginning six months later and ending eighteen months later." He also indicated that estimates of expenditures were entirely provisional, giving warning that additional appropriations would be requested if economic conditions did not improve.

With these reservations, the President then proceeded to outline a budget plan calling for total outlays of $6,869,000,000—a decided reduction from the actual outlays of the year just closed. Receipts were placed at $5,919,000,000—somewhat below the actual returns for 1937-38. Now, six months later, the revised estimates indicate that expenditures in the current fiscal year will reach $8,985,000,000 while receipts will drop to $5,000,000,000. The result is an anticipated net deficit of $3,985,000,000 (that is, a deficit without provision for debt retirement) as contrasted with the original deficit estimate of $950,000,000.

This great discrepancy between the January and July forecasts strongly suggests the desirability of delaying preparation and publication of budgetary statements until there is reasonable assurance that the budgetary figures will approximate actualities. But while the time lag in the present instance provides a convenient excuse for errors it does not adequately explain the extreme unreliability of the January estimates.

When the budget statement was issued, it was generally realized that the depression had resulted in sharp declines in taxable incomes certain to be reflected in shrinking tax receipts during the current fiscal year. However, the overoptimistic estimates of revenue were in conformity with official efforts to minimize the seriousness of the business picture.

As there was little ground last January for anticipating a sudden upturn in business in the months immediately ahead, it was practically a foregone conclusion that the President would request additional relief appropriations before Congress adjourned. Nevertheless, the premature budget message, offering only partial and provisional estimates of outgo for the following year, had one pronounced advantage from the viewpoint of spending advocates. It cast a mildly rosy hue over a really gloomy prospect and distracted public attention from the Government's financial troubles. Hence when the spending-lending program, carrying billions of dollars of unbudgeted appropriations, was presented to Congress it encountered much less opposition than would probably have developed had it formed part of the regular budget plan.

It is now too late to do more than protest against a scale of expenditures that on the basis of latest official estimates is expected to produce the greatest of all peace-time deficits with the exception of the year when the cash bonus was voted. Especially disturbing is the fact that this near-record deficit will be the ninth in a continuous series and will raise the public debt (exclusive of contingent liabilities on guaranteed issues) above $40,000,000,000. It is worth noting, too, that even if estimated expenditures had remained at the level anticipated in January, expenditures would still have been about $1,869,000,000 in excess of receipts—or about double the January estimate of the 1939 deficit.

The country is plainly headed for financial disaster unless the scale of spending is drastically reduced. That is apparent from a survey of Government income and outgo, past and prospective. And even with expenditures brought within the limits of the people's taxable capacity, a satisfactory adjustment of income to outgo from year to year will never be assured until we reform our tax system and provide more dependable and at the same time more flexible sources of tax revenues.

Washington Shares.

The teapot proportions of the tempest stirred up around the District Building a few days ago now stand revealed. It was then reported that Washington's hopes for a PWA program had been virtually blighted by the failure of the local Commissioners to submit detailed plans with their applications. Yesterday Secretary Ickes effectively disproved these fears by awarding funds for three District projects.

As a result, work will begin shortly on the long-awaited Municipal Court Building, the sorely needed annex at Gallinger Hospital, and quarters for the Juvenile Court the functions of which were considerably expanded by Congress at the last session. The prospect of these additions to the municipal plant is made attractive by the fact that the Federal Government will pay outright for 45 per cent of the construction costs and loan the District the remainder needed. This properly places Washington on an equal footing with other cities receiving PWA grants. Heretofore, the Capital received only 30 per cent subsidies.

Nor will the three projects now approved necessarily be the sum of Washington's participation in the PWA appropriation. The Commissioners have filed plans for seven other projects to cost $9,555,000, in addition to the $2,800,000 already allotted. While it is doubtful whether all will materialize, there should be good hope for at least several of them. In particular, the proposed improvements for the District Jail and the essential renovation of Gallinger Hospital recommend themselves to Secretary Ickes' attention.

Are We Good Enough For It?

Speaking from the train at Pueblo, on his transcontinental tour, President Roosevelt observed that two impressions on this trip are for him outstanding. One of these, in his own words, is "the growing understanding that everybody seems to have of our national problems."

That assertion unfortunately arouses doubt. What actual evidence is there of a "growing understanding," universally shared and constructively exercised by the American public, concerning the dominant problems of the day?

Such understanding is none too apparent in the bewildered fatalism which marks the reception of the revised budget estimates for the current fiscal year. Nine successive years of deficits, and a Federal debt which alone averages over $300 for every man, woman and child in the country, constitute a national problem in every sense of the word. But there is little indication of any compelling comprehension of what this now habitual deficit financing inevitably foreshadows.

An erratic stock market, running far ahead of any actual increase in national wealth and promising gains primarily to insiders and shrewd speculators, is another national problem as to the significance of which any general growth in understanding is doubtful. The same must be said concerning the huge load of unemployment which continues to oppress our social structure regardless of the liberality of the spending program employed to combat its ravages.

There is popular approval, certainly, for the growing reliance upon subsidies to favored groups. But there is not much evident understanding of the effects of such policy. There is strong support, again, for the idea of more money for less work; of more leisure without sacrifice to gain it. But whether there is any growth in actually understanding how a nation can eat its cake and have it, is far more dubious.

The New Deal has unquestionably done much to awaken constructive interest in current problems. It has touched the public conscience and in many respects made the American people as a whole more receptive to considerations of social justice and more eager to attain that goal. For that awakening President Roosevelt deserves enduring credit. He has defined objectives and laid down standards which are in many respects far healthier than those which ruled a decade ago.

But at the same time the New Deal has assiduously spread the doctrine that all the population, not merely a small parasitic minority, can confidently expect something for nothing. It has adopted the philosophy that the state owes every man a living and has tacitly encouraged the growth of indifference and envy at the expense of the old American virtues of thrift, self-reliance and unremitting toil.

There is nothing new in this easy philosophy of government as a universal aunt. In one form or another it has been tried in the period of decadence of every forgotten empire which the tides of time have swept away. What would be new is any resolute popular opposition to such a program, based on real understanding of its long-range implications. Such understanding Mr. Roosevelt does little to stimulate and much to lull to sleep.

Our form of government, the President also remarked at Pueblo, "is good enough for us." That remark is beyond criticism. But it begs the question. The real issue, which as the tide is flowing some Administration will some day be forced squarely to confront, is whether we are good enough for our form of government.

A Cud To Chew.

One can easily imagine Hamlet and Job going into a huddle to decide the case of a certain colored housebreaker now in the District Jail. Their conversation would probably run something like this:

Job (chuckling)—I escaped by the skin of my teeth.

Hamlet (thoughtfully)—Ay, marry, it fits well. The less they deserve the more merit is in your bounty.

And so one lives and learns. If you happen to be wearing store teeth that don't properly fit you may have them adjusted by an expert without cost and the Government will board and lodge you while you are under treatment. All you have to do is to become a lawbreaker and get pinched. That, at least, is the case with the burglar in question. Not until his teeth are in proper condition will he be sentenced and moved to Lorton.

We have here an interesting variation of the law with teeth in it. The law-abiding man with dentist bills to pay may find his teeth on edge when he chews it over; but that, of course, is merely incidental.

Insurance Fund Surplus.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: An attempt is being made locally to create the impression in the public mind that the unemployment compensation taxes contributed by employers are accumulating at the rate of about $500,000 a month, whereas only $250,000 is alleged to be necessary to meet the benefit payments.

The actual situation is as follows: Unemployment compensation insurance payments to the unemployed are calculated on the basis of 40 per cent of the individual worker's past earnings. These payments are given for a period of 16 weeks, maximum, and may not exceed $15 a week. Actually, the payments rarely exceed $8 a week. It may readily be seen from this that the payments are by no means excessive, particularly when one takes into consideration the fact that these unemployed workers are expected to maintain a family upon such a small sum.

If there is sincere objection to the accumulation of a surplus, which accumulation is only natural as a result of the low benefit payments, the rapidity of the accumulation could be stopped by the simple process of increasing the scope of the unemployment compensation act to include workers that are now excluded from its provisions, such as those employed by the WPA projects, and also by increasing the payments to individual workers.

It is questionable, however, whether the basis of the objections to the accumulation of these funds is really the fear of accumulating a huge surplus or the desire to decrease the required taxes and at the same time to discredit the unemployment compensation act.

Local labor unions should fight any attempt to reduce the employers' contributions under the unemployment compensation act. An excellent method whereby such reduction could be counteracted would be for the unions to inaugurate a practice of rotating their membership on jobs so as to increase the number of persons unemployed, instead of extending the period of unemployment of a smaller number, and thus increasing the number of unemployed eligible to unemployment compensation benefits. This would naturally necessitate the continuation of the present employers' contributions in order to maintain the funds necessary to meet the payments to an increased number of unemployed.

Resents Different Time.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: For years I have heard fables of beautiful symphony concerts at the waterfront but have never attended any of them. The reason is I work at the Interior Department, which is on daylight saving time, and so outside of office hours I am out of gear with everything around me.

Cities hesitate to go on daylight saving time because it throws them out of gear with other cities. But when a group within a city does so, one wonders why the old proverb about doing as the Romans do doesn't apply to the United States Capital as well as to the Italian capital.

Unlike Edison, I cannot go on four hours' sleep a night. In frequent temperatures of 96 degrees one can do with even a little more rest than usual. The only way I can get it and keep any kind of healthful rhythm is to foreswear public entertainments, shunt my friends home who call of evenings and go to bed like Papa's nice little boy. I then rise in the morning, only to prematurely awaken other members of the family, receive their glowers, eat my breakfast alone and put in another day which has no social life to crown its close.

They will tell you at the Department of the Interior that they balloted on the plan. I never saw one of the ballots or talked with anyone who would put "yes" on one. Unless the D. I. can be coaxed to fall in line with the rest of Washington, will The Post, which I read continuously, please be so kind as to not print anything more about the waterfront concerts? I want to forget about them. C. J. W.

Recession's Source.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As the son of an old newspaperman and a quite regular reader of your paper, I was surprised and astonished this morning to learn that a real scoop of immeasurable importance to the entire country had slipped off the front page, where it should have appeared with streaming headlines, and had found itself relegated to an inside page with a modest single column.

I refer to the reason for the recession, a subject that has occupied the attention of economists all over the world. The W. C. T. U., without any fuss or expectation of reward, has quietly found the answer. It is liquor. Simple, itsn't it! Furthermore, their findings are backed by a businessmen's organization.

On first reading the article I was a bit skeptical, but on delving into history I found that, sure enough, when all previous depressions and recessions occurred the country had liquor. And then I thought, "What about the prohibition era?" we had a depression then, I remember. But again I recalled that at that time we had both prohibition and liquor. So now we have the answer. What are we going to do about it?

My best hat is off to the W. C. T. U. K. W. SLAUSON.

F. D. R. A Pickwickian?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: When the President says he wishes sometimes to be considered as President of the United States and at other times to be considered a partisan politician, is he not colliding with himself and lowering the dignity of the Presidency?

Everyone familiar with Charles Dickens remembers that in the "Pickwick Club" those debatable questions which did not seem quite lucid to the average individual were to be considered in a "Pickwickian sense." Is this what the President means?

When Stevenson wrote "The Strange Case of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" he did not expect us to actually believe these personalities were interchangeable—but does the President expect us to take his changing personalities seriously?

Isn't he rapidly electing himself a charter member of the immortal "Pickwick Club?"

New Swedeniana.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Many thanks to "Interested" for his references to works dealing with Count Axel Oxenstierna in The Post of July 12. I realize now I had been a bit ambiguous in my previous letter, wherein it was stated that I had failed to observe mention of the chancellor's support of the settlement of New Sweden. I had meant that in the newspaper reports of the celebration and quotations from the various speeches I had not observed any notice of the count's name.

For "Interested's" information (if he has not read it already) I would heartily recommend Christopher Ward's brilliant, humorous and informative volume, "The Dutch and the Swedes on the Delaware" (year of publication forgotten). Full and complete credit is given therein to Oxenstierna for his colonial enterprise and, in addition, it makes for highly entertaining reading.

On second thought, I believe President Roosevelt was "off" by a mere hundred pounds in his allusion to Gov. Printz's remarkable obesity.

The "Accurate Bombing" Of Japan.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A recent Reuter dispatch, quoting "Accurate bombing of Canton was carried out despite very heavy anti-aircraft fire."

May we, foreign physicians of Canton and witnesses of the events of the past 14 days, call attention to the "accurate bombing" on June 6. Judging by the results it was aimed chiefly at a large central section of the open city of Canton, between the electric light plant and Taai Ping road, from east to west and south to north, from the Pearl River to Wai Fuk road. This district contains a large number of hospitals and doctors' offices—a quiet zone.

The accuracy of the airmen's aim is attested by the fact that a bomb struck the Paul Doumer Hospital (French) and destroyed the operating rooms, X-ray equipment and laboratory, just as they were prepared to operate upon people who had been bombarded elsewhere. Bombs fell perilously near several other hospitals, shattering glass in some. Are we to assume that the Japanese airmen wish to destroy hospitals in Canton along with other private property?

One bomb aimed accurately at the new Wing On Tong building, struck the Bund between it and the river. Hundreds of refugees were standing under the shelter of this building, and many of these were killed and injured. Another bomb was "aimed" for a group of sampans in the river. Scores of these were destroyed and many of the occupants killed. The Red Cross headquarters, close by, narrowly escaped destruction.

During the morning planes swooped low over Shameen, the foreign concession. Hundreds of civilians in the city were killed and wounded by the bombing and machine gunning of the Japanese airmen. At the Canton Hospital alone 610 wounded noncombatants were treated. Many of these required amputations and other major operations. In these bombings, from the explosive force of the bombs, from bomb fragments and from falling structures, the dead often far outnumber the wounded. Hundreds of wounded were taken to other hospitals. We have seen extremely few cases wounded by anti-aircraft shrapnel.

In the last ten days of persistent and severe bombing of the City of Canton we know of no genuine military establishment having been bombed here. In fact, there are very few such. No wounded soldiers have been admitteld to our hospitals, but only civilians. At least one doctor and many Red Cross workers were killed and injured while rescuing wounded people.

The Japanese spokesman declares that the bombing was "accurate." We must therefore assume that it was their deliberate intention to bomb the places mentioned, and civilians and private property throughout this great city. Furthermore, bombs were dropped from a great height, hence discrimination is quite impossible. It is, therefore, our firm conviction that the Japanese military forces have determined to ruthlessly destroy the people of Canton and their public and private buildings. If this is not so they can prove it by ceasing this wholesale massacre of Canton citizens.

As physicians, devoted to the saving of human life, we vigorously protest against this determined policy of the Japanese air force to ruthlessly destroy human life.

Moonlight And Music.

A SKIPPING Straus melody lingered as Director Kindler bowed his last and left the shell at the finish of the season's first Water Gate Concert. A moon whitened the columns of the Lincoln Memorial and a faint odor of boxwood misted over the lounging crowds massed at the river's edge. A car stopped in a line of traffic and the radio announced the second act of "La Traviata" from Cincinnati's open-air opera.

Music and the moon.

And I thought of another time that there was music and a moon, perhaps the queerest music and the strangest moon I'd ever heard or seen. We were entering the County of Caithness in northern Scotland.

As we hiked along the winding road through the moors of purple heather, going north all the time, it seemed as if we were on top of the earth. To the left was the blurred gray sea; to the right were miles and miles of moor fading away in a purple distance to meet the gray horizon. We crossed a small hill and I looked back. We were on the very top. The horizon was near, the clouds very low and racing in a fleecy mass toward the east. I looked back again and felt that tingle that comes with seeing something fine and great for the first time.

A dim light came through the low tumbling gray clouds. Due to the hill behind us the land seemed to suddenly drop off into nothingness. That was the picture that startled me. The moor was like a thing alive, gray, waiting and waiting. We were utterly and terribly alone at that moment. Gashed gray cliffs on one side, and behind—nothing. The eerie light from the clouds reflected onto the moor in a path of dusty gray light, leading up the hill and over. The light played on those clouds as they disappeared over the nearby horizon in a devilish, frenzied manner.

Gray stone houses, long and low, spotted the green hills, and we passed into the village of Wick. A few needle-masted little ships bobbed gently in the harbor.

"Aye, it's a verra bad season, me lad. It's no been good now since some four weeks past," the blue-sweatered fellow said. "No trawlers put in here to sell their bloody fish, and it is apt to be a hard season for us this next, what with business as it is."

He walked along with us, his iron-cleated shoes scraping the cement breakwater.

"However, times be what they are, we meeght as weel enjoy a wee bit o' life. There's a carnival in toon, ye know. Ye'll be wantin' to see that, no dout?"

We agreed and followed his directions along the pier toward a lane leading from the village. Wick was indeed in a serious condition. According to a recent Edinburgh edition of the London Express, no herring had been sold at the market for over a month. The market had closed, buyers had gone to either Sunderland, Peters Head or Lerwick, Shetland, where the fish were running, leaving stranded the scores of laborers who depended on the herring season for a winter's living. The streets were deserted this evening. Even the little dairies that usually were open later than the shops to sell milk and cheese and sometimes a raisin bun were closed. The man from Hamelin might well have just piped his way through those streets. The only visible person was our sailor with the blue sweater who soon left us.

"Well, a fine night to ye," he said. "The tents are joost ahead now. I may see ye later, after a bit o' stew in me galley yonder."

He pointed to a little ship in the harbor and waved us down the lane as he turned up the pier.

Ahead were the tents of the carnival pitched in a grassy hollow. The first one was a fortune teller's. We stopped to read the poster and a toothless head asked if we'd like our fortunes.

"A verra goodun, and on'y sixpence I'll charge ye." We stepped closer.

"No? Weel, let me see yer hand, youngun. Ye'll no be sorry, I tell ye. Ye've a good un there."

A group of dirty, ragged little children had gathered and were watching with interest. Some were bolder then others and pushed their way to the edge of the tent, listening to the conversation.

"Come noo, me laddie, ye'll no miss a shilling nor sixpence." Then turning to an overbold little fellow, "and now begone, ye bloody bit o' brodie, or I'll see ye oot o' here for good."

A very low moon slid from beneath the clouds and faded the lights of the little fair. The steam calliope of the midget merry-go-round had stopped and only the cry of a Cheapside barker came enticingly from a farther tent.

Then it happened. The music blared out in a sudden burst. The old hag had forgotten the lines of a hand and was smiling as she listened.

"We 'ave a bit o' song noo and then, too." Our toothless clairvoyant was looking toward a man who was cranking an old victrola which was attached to a megaphone loud-speaker.

It was Bing Crosby singing "I'm an Old Cowhand."

Imaginary Interviews.

(Uncle Sam and the Men's Clothing Industry.)

Clothing Industry—Good morning. You came in for a fit?

Uncle Sam—No, but I'll probably have one before I get through with this.

• • • •

C. I.—Oh, I didn't know you at first. Your'e shorter than the last time I saw you.

Uncle Sam—And I'm getting shorter by the minute! A few more of these $10,000,000 buy-ups of surplus goods and I can get fitted out in the midgets' department.

• • • •

C. I. (showing some samples)—You should take more smart sport clothes. Feel the material!

Uncle Sam—I told you these are for the unemployed.

C. I.—Listen, when a man ain't working he feels even better in a sport suit. Look at this Palm Beach model with plus-fours.

C. I.—It's worth trying just to find out!

• • • •

Uncle Sam—Nothing doing. Show me some business suits.

C. I.—How should a man out of work look any better in a business suit? Look! Here is something very smart; the Toppinkopper varsity line, tailors to America's universities. Look at that college cut.

Uncle Sam—You don't seem to understand; I'm buying clothes for the rank and file.

C. I.—In smart clothes like those you can't tell the rank from the file. I'm telling you! Feel the material!

• • • •

Uncle Sam—The stuff I buy is going to mechanics, clerks, teamsters, laborers, farmhands.

C. I. (anxiously)—I'll take out the label and put in "Goldenwasser's Utility Clothiers, tailors to the man in the street."

Uncle Sam—But the colors are too loud.

C. I.—In bright colors a man feels better. Look! (Holding up something with pink stripes.) A suit like this would end the depression.

C. I.—You'd be surprised how many people at race tracks need 'em. Feel the material! How about some overcoats of camel's hair?

Uncle Sam—I'm not clothing polo players.

C. I.—A polo player or a gas-station attendant, what's the difference in cold weather? How about a raccoon model?

Uncle Sam (sternly)—No fur coats.

C. I. (very confidentially)—I'll tell you the truth; it's not genuine. Listen, could you use some hunting suits?

Uncle Sam—The people I am clothing can't hunt.

C. I.—I'll throw in a rifle and take off 10 per cent more. Feel the material. My friend, for you, I'll do something very special.

Uncle Sam—I was afraid that was coming! I'll tell you what I'll do. You're asking $10,000,000 for all your stock. I'll give you $8,000,000.

C. I.—I couldn't do it. It's too little money.

L'Affaire Otter

By J. D. W.

"Thunderer's" Correspondence.

BRITONS with a message for the empire can deliver it in a pleasing variety of ways. If it is too brief for a book or too dignified for Hyde Park, London's traditional symbol of free speech, it may be turned over to the London Times, which devotes about four columns a day to letters.

A few weeks ago a Col. Graham started up the sort of hare Times correspondents love to track down. The colonel said that otters never were seen in the daytime, an assertion he is not likely to repeat if he has been following the Times lately. Maj. Gen. W. A. Watson wrote in to say he had seen 20 otters one day in central India and G. D. Hale Carpenter, an entomologist, remembered seeing an otter one day in 1914 when he was on Kizima, one of the smaller islands of the Sese Archipelago.

"Sitting on top of a little cliff I watched an otter lying on its back on top of the water and frolicking with a fish which it repeatedly threw up into the air and caught again."

• • • •

IN CONTRAST to this playful picture of sportive otters stands the report of Guy Dollman who, the summer of 1906, saw early in the morning two dog otters fighting underneath the Bridge of Sighs, which crosses the Cam River in Cambridge. "The fight was a very intense one and the noise of the combatants so great that it brought one of the college porters out, who thought the disturbance was due to boisterous undergraduates making merry in the early morning sun. The fight went on for fully five minutes and I had an excellent view of the contest."

The Times writers are sticklers for detail, so Mr. Dollman described the sound of the fighting otters, a thought which would have escaped most correspondents. "The noise, so far as I remember it, was a mixture of grunts, barks and a high whistling note, something like what is heard issuing from a cinema organ."

• • • •

THE AFFAIR OTTER did not cease with these convincing reports. Lieut. Col. F. J. Carruthers, of Dormont, Lockerbie, said he watched otters fishing in the lake near his home every morning between 8 and 9 and again at teatime. Admiral C. F. Dampier who lives, somewhat improbably, at Highfield, Bishop's Waltham, Hants, told how he was fishing one day from a boat and it began to rain. He spread his umbrella above him.

"I heard some irregular 'plops' in the water," he writes, "and, looking round, saw an otter sitting on the end of a tree which had fallen into the water about 20 yards away. She was apparently teaching her cubs to swim, for three or four of them kept on running along the tree, the base of which was on the shore, and when they got to her she knocked them off into the water and they swam ashore and then came along the tree to her again and so on. They took not the slightest notice of me; I suppose the umbrella was a sufficient disguise."

• • • •

Chicago's Turn

HELLO! Whose cat has kittens now? Only a week or two ago, the British admiralty was proudly demonstrating to King George its new eight-barreled antiaircraft guns, "Chicago pianos," calculated to blow hostile bombing planes to kingdom come. And named, forsooth, after the sawed-off shotguns and the "Tommy-guns" of Chicago's former gangsters.

What do you know about that!

And now we learn that while major crime in Chicago showed a 5 per cent decrease last year, London crime has increased by 10 per cent. Nor, despite the touted efficiency of Scotland Yard, are more than 23 per cent of London's indictable crimes officially solved. The shoe, it would appear, is on the other foot.

Observer Traces Europe's Course Since April, Believing Month Marked Decisive Change In Franco-British Policy.

LIVING CLOSE to the event and following the details of the news day by day, it is extremely difficult to distinguish between what really matters in the long run for the peace of Europe and what is merely a momentary sensation. But it would seem, looking backward, that events took an important, perhaps a decisive, turn in the spring of this year, and that the present pause, the relative quiet which prevails just now, is due to the fact that all the governments concerned are adjusting themselves to the change.

LIPPMANN.

If we look back to April just after the Nazi seizure of Austria and the negotiation of the Anglo-Italian agreement, we can see that the diplomacy of Europe was determined by three main expectations. One was that Gen. Franco would win his war within a few weeks. The second was that Czechoslovakia was lost and that it would quickly be absorbed by Hitler. The third was that the British government under Mr. Chamberlain's leadership had discounted Spain and Czechoslovakia, and that it hoped these victories would satisfy Mussolini and Hitler sufficiently to make possible a general European peace based on agreements with Italy and Germany.

Three Expectations Confounded In Month.

THAT IS WHERE matters stood at the end of April. Then events took a decisive turn and the three expectations turned out to be false. Gen. Franco did not win a quick victory. The resistance of Republican Spain, strengthened by the arrival of munitions, proved sufficient to postpone more or less indefinitely the victory of Gen. Franco. In May it transpired that Czechoslovakia was not another Austria and that the Czechs could not be taken except by conquest in what would be a major war.

The fact that Spain and Czechoslovakia did not collapse as expected undermined the policy of the Chamberlain government. For while Mr. Chamberlain might have permitted the Germans and Italians to win, he could not, even if he had wished it, compel the Spanish Republicans and the Czechs to surrender, or force France to connive at such an outcome.

This change in the situation as it stood in the spring and as it stands now, has been the cause of a radical change in the British conception of the European problem. The change is still in process. But unmistakably, there is under way a revaluation of British policy inside the Conservative party and inside the Chamberlain government.

Danger In Riches Of Central Europe.

WHEREAS it had been supposed in April that peace could be bought by abandoning Spain and Czechoslovakia, experience and further reflection have been leading to the conclusion that peace cannot be bought on these terms. From every quarter the evidence has been coming in that to abandon Spain and Czechoslovakia is not to win peace but to give Germany and Italy the indispensable strategic means to fight a great war. With Czechoslovakia under German control, the resources of central Europe would enable Germany to defy the power of the British navy. With Spain a part of the Fascist alliance, France is surrounded, the Mediterranean ceases to be a highway between France and her African empire, between Britain and her Near Eastern empire.

Thus instead of appeasing Germany and Italy by abandoning Spain and Czechoslovakia, this policy would give to Hitler and Mussolini such a strategic superiority that they could dictate the reorganization of Europe and the redistribution of the British and French empires.

There is little doubt that this view, held already by perhaps 80 per cent of the French, is now taking hold in the minds of the British ruling class. That is why Mr. Chamberlain does not put the Anglo-Italian agreement into effect. That is why he is increasingly resigned to the fact that France would fight for Czechoslovakia, and that Britain cannot separate herself from France if there is a war.

Choice Defined As Between Two Evils.

THUS the great change in Europe since April may be said to be the realization that Spain and Czechoslovakia cannot be sacrificed to the cause of peace and that they must be defended in the interest of peace. It is, of course, a very dangerous policy. But Europe is an extremely dangerous place. The choice open is not between a safe course and a dangerous one, but only between a course which is more dangerous and one which is somewhat less dangerous.

The opinion now in the ascendant is that it is less dangerous to oppose Germany and Italy before they control the vital strategic points, that is now when they are unable to wage a long war, than it would be later when they were in a strategic position to fight a long war.

On this estimate of the position, the British and the French are tending to consolidate their forces.

Trade War

By Barnet Nover

Germany Threatens Brazil.

FOR SOME TIME relations between Germany and Brazil have been anything but cordial. The jubilation in the Nazi press over Getulio Vargas' assumption of dictatorial power last November turned to bitterness when Brazil's dictator, far from showing any disposition to become the Latin-American partner of the Fascist Internationale, proceeded to bear down heavily against Nazi formations in his country.

There was further resentment in Berlin when the Rio government suggested that German agents might have been behind the abortive revolt of the green-shirted Integralistas last May. But the crowning blow of all came when, toward the end of June, the Bank of Brazil stopped the purchase of German clearing marks.

• • • •

AS LONG AS the Third Reich remains short of its goal of complete self-containment, and that goal may never be reached, it must continue to purchase from abroad supplies which cannot be produced at home. And these purchases must be paid for in gold or goods or services.

Germany's gold supply, even with the addition of the Austrian reserve, is negligible. Payment for foreign raw materials and foodstuffs must, therefore, be made wholly in goods and services. Which means that the Third Reich, even as all other countries, must carry on an unceasing search for markets.

One of these markets which Germany once viewed with considerable hopefulness is Brazil. The largest Latin-American republic is an important producer of certain commodities desired by the Reich, for instance, coffee, cotton, manganese, rubber and tropical fruits. And Brazil has been just as anxious to sell these products as Germany has been to buy them. The difficulty was in finding a way whereby such an exchange could be made possible.

• • • •

IN THE OLD DAYS the procedure was simple. There was in existence an elaborate and highly adjustable mechanism of foreign exchange which made it possible for international trade to flow freely. No nation was particularly alarmed when its trade with another nation showed an excess of imports over exports. It was taken for granted that exports and imports would all come out even in the end, that an unfavorable balance in the trade with one nation was offset by a favorable balance in the trade with another nation.

But the old system no longer operates with the ease or the universality it once did. Exchange restrictions are now the rule in many nations and in certain cases, Germany being an outstanding example, all foreign trade is rigorously controlled. To a very considerable extent, in fact, Germany's trade is now directly or indirectly being conducted on a crude barter basis.

• • • •

IT COMES DOWN to this. Instead of paying for foreign purchases with foreign exchange acquired through the sale of her products abroad, permitting the seller to use that exchange at his discretion, Germany has worked out a system of payments through special clearing arrangements.

Reduced to simple terms this system operates about as follows: Germany buys coffee, cotton, etc., from Brazil. She pays for them in German marks deposited to the credit of the Bank of Brazil. That bank, in turn, reimburses the Brazilian exporters. But in order to reimburse itself for such payments the Bank of Brazil must somehow exchange the registered marks for Brazilian exchange.

To do this it is necessary to find purchasers in Brazil for German goods. But if there are not enough of such purchases the registered marks are useless to the Bank of Brazil. To create a market for the surplus marks, therefore, they must be sold at a discount, making it possible for the Brazilian importer of German products to buy more cheaply than would otherwise be the case.

In essence, therefore, the German system of trade clearances is a form of dumping. From Germany's point of view that is one of its advantages. But by the same token it is resented in other countries. However, with surplus commodities on their hands many nations, particularly in southeastern Europe and Latin America, have been forced to put up with the system. Last year, in fact, German exports to Latin America rose to 11.2 per cent of the total. It had been 4.4 per cent in 1931. Her imports from those countries similarly rose from 10.3 per cent to 17 per cent.

• • • •

BRAZIL has found the system objectionable on two counts.

In the first place it has meant taking more German goods than the Brazilian market could comfortably absorb or, alternatively, selling her own products at a sacrifice. In the second place the suspicion has arisen that Germany used some of her Brazilian purchases, coffee for example, for resale abroad, thus cutting into existing Brazilian markets.

For some time, therefore, the Rio government has been seeking to cut down Brazilian sales to Germany to the point where these sales matched Brazil's capacity to absorb German products. And recently the Bank of Brazil completely stopped the purchase of German clearing markets.

• • • •

IN RETALIATION Germany has announced the complete suspension of purchases from Brazil. This clearly has a double purpose. In the first place it is evidently intended to prove to the Brazilian government that Germany is in a position to strike a serious blow to Brazilian trade. For some time Brazil has been expanding its production of cotton and much of it has gone to Germany. Now with American cotton production at high levels, Brazil has been told the German market is closed until Brazil shows herself more amenable to Berlin's wishes than she has proved during the last months.

But the German threat has a political as well as an economic significance. It also constitutes a warning to Brazil to go slowly in carrying out the anti-Nazi program of the Vargas regime. Unable, because of the Monroe Doctrine and for other reasons, to use other means of pressure on Brazil, Germany is now using the device of a trade war in an effort to achieve the same end. And the very fact that the German move in cutting off all purchases from Brazil is so sweeping shows that it is expected to meet with success.

Briton On America

By J. B. Priestley.

Time To Change Values.

MANY EUROPEANS who visit America misinterpret what they see here. They imagine they are looking at a rough-and-ready colonial imitation of our old European civilization.

In my opinion, they are quite wrong. They are, in fact, about 100 years out of date. What they are actually seeing here is the early stages of a new civilization, which will probably be known to future historians as the American. And all the virtues and vices of American life belong to the early stages of a new civilization.

A new civilization is always considered barbaric, uncritical and materialistic by representatives of older decaying cultures. It always expresses itself first in what seems to outsiders an astonishing architecture, as the United States has done. Its new social outlook is always the result not only of economic and political differences from the older world, but also of a new mixture of races, as in America. And it will take time for this mixture to settle.

• • • •

ALL IS WELL, then? Not quite. The responsibility remains, and the American who accepts this trust for mankind cannot lean back and let things happen. It is true that many criticisms of American life have been stupid because the persons who made such criticisms did not understand the task of the American people, the pioneering task of conquering a vast new territory.

But the stage of pioneering is finished. And there is a danger that pioneering values will be carried forward into a period where they are no longer necessary and may even be a menace.

Put it this way. For years the American has been compelled to think in terms of quantity and not of quality. It is my belief that the American who accepts this responsibility must now begin to think sharply in terms of quality. There are plenty of things here in America, but now they must be better things. There is plenty of life here, but now it must be better life.

Five Per Cent Disaffection Among Democrats Would Give G. O. P. 30 New Seats in House of Representatives; Writer Stresses New Deal Wedge.

IN THE ELECTION next November, the central question is, How many seats will the Republicans gain in the House of Representatives? The present figures are 327 Democrats and 90 Republicans.

SULLIVAN.

What is here printed does not pretend to be an answer nor a guess to an answer. I have merely gone over the returns in all districts in the 1936 Congressional elections. I have then picked out those districts in which a 5 per cent net swing from Democratic to Republican would elect the Republican candidate. Five per cent would not be a large switch.

For example, consider the Seventh Ohio District. The results in 1936 were Democrat, 68,456; Republican, 67,454. Obviously, a 5 per cent switch of Democratic votes to Republican this year would elect a Republican Congressman in stead of a Democrat.

The computation is based on two assumptions. The first is that out of every 100 persons who voted Democratic in 1936, 5 will this year vote Republican. The second assumption is that all who in 1936 voted Republican will this year again vote Republican. No account is taken of third parties or new voters. Applying this computation to the example above, the Seventh Ohio District, the result this year would be: Republican, 70,877; Democrat, 65,033.

30 Projected Seats Represent 15 States.

APPLYING this computation to all the Congressional districts of the country, the result would be that 30 seats are distributed throughout the States as follows:

Connecticut	1
Illinois	4
Indiana	2
Iowa	3
Kansas	1
Michigan	1
New Hampshire	1
New Jersey	3
New York	2
Ohio	4
Pennsylvania	3
Rhode Island	1
West Virginia	1
Wisconsin	2

If the computation is sound, the Republicans would gain 30 seats in November. The new Congress would contain 120 Republicans, 297 Democrats.

Is the assumption sound? Is it accurate to suppose that, in the net, out of every 100 persons who voted Democratic in 1936, 5 will this year vote Republican? As things go, this is not a large switch. Much larger switches have often occurred.

Does this computation conform to the average observation of readers? Among the acquaintances of each reader, are there as many as five persons who voted Democratic in 1936 but will this year vote Republican?

Lack Of Roosevelt Name Said Important.

THE POSSIBILITY of a 5 per cent net switch, or even a larger one, is supported in part by an important condition. In 1936 Mr. Roosevelt was running for President. His name was at the head of the Democratic ticket. Because his name was at the head of the ticket, many persons, interested mainly in voting for him, voted also for the Democratic candidate for Congress. This year Mr. Roosevelt's name will not be at the head of the ticket. Almost any competent observer would say that this factor alone, the fact that Mr. Roosevelt is not running, would account for a switch of 5 per cent, perhaps more.

So much for a 5 per cent switch. It would result in a gain of 30 seats for the Republicans. If the switch were 10 per cent, the Republican gain would be 68 seats.

What is said here is confined to changes in the numbers of Democratic and Republican seats. Nothing is said about the distinction between two classes of Democrats—New Dealers and non-New Dealers. There are, of course, no election statistics which throw any light on this distinction. But we know the distinction exists. It divides the party almost in two. In the Senate fight on President Roosevelt's court reform measure, while there was never any formal roll call directly on the issue, informal polls said that 42 Democrats favored the measure, 33 opposed.

I have said that in the November elections the central question is, How many seats will the Republicans gain in the House? Equally important, however, is the other question, To what extent will the Democrats be New Deal and to what extent non-New Deal?

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

In Love With Married Man Whose Wife Expects Child, Girl Asks Help in Plotting Divorce.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Having read your column for a year, it is with the utmost confidence that I bring my problem to you. I am in love with a married man and I know he is in love with me. He was married in December, 1935, and has an 11-months-old son and is expecting another child in August or September. He and his wife were never in love, they constantly argue and never agree on anything.

* * * *

He and I fell in love at first sight. He wants a divorce from his wife and is wondering just how to obtain it. He has never spoken of it to her because she would only make trouble. Should he go to her and ask for a divorce or just make her so angry that she will "kick him out?" If he does ask her for a divorce, where could he get it? What is the most reasonable rate? He couldn't afford to pay much alimony. How is alimony figured out—according to the children or according to the father's income? If his wife refuses him a divorce, what should we do? Please be careful in what you say, for we depend upon it. E. L. B.

* * * *

DEAR E. L. B.: In spite of the fact that one who conducts a department of this sort has a certain obligation to suffer fools gladly, I am constrained to submit that my principal reaction to your letter is one of distaste. So you know that the man loves you? Just how do you know? Because your pulses set up a terrific commotion at sight of each other, and because he falls so far below rudimentary standards of decent behavior as to make wanton love (so-called) to you behind the back of his wife who is with child? Because he whines and cries to you—poor, misguided, infatuation-driven dim-wit—of his marital unhappiness with her (who is, in all probability, so entirely blameless for his discontent that he has no grounds for complaint to her).

* * * *

I haven't a doubt but that you are the person who has brought up the subject of divorce for discussion in this triangle—and that in so doing you now have the man just as much on the fence as he had previously had you. He probably is enjoying his illicit relationship with you at the moment, without being at all sure he would wish it to eventuate in divorce and remarriage to you, and for that reason—and that alone—is failing to bring matters to issue with his wife. But, rather than admit his selfish dalliance for what it is, he prefers to vilify his wife, as a woman who constantly thwarts and is thwarted by him, and yet would continue venomously to hold him against his will. His attempted rationalization of his silence and inaction sounds like so much tommyrot to me.

* * * *

If he doesn't love his wife and hasn't for some time (you say, indeed, that they "were never in love") then I maintain that he has been practicing an outrageous deceit upon her; probably co-equal, in fact, to the job he has done with you. If some love and some lovemaking—real or pretended—didn't exist in the relationship, you may depend upon it that he (or had we not better say she?) would not be expecting a second child in the near future.

* * * *

I realize, of course, that the laws of reproduction do not wait upon the laws of romance; but you may take my word for it that no woman as pig-headedly selfish as your paramour would have you believe his wife is, would invite the travail of childbirth a second time even for a man she loved who loved her—and much less would she risk that eventuality in co-partnership with a bitter antagonist in marriage. The man's wife is having another child either because she fancied herself, up to the time of the child's conception, at least, as a woman secure in her husband's love and protection; or, because she so loved her husband, in spite of his faults and their occasional disagreements, that the task of bearing his children appealed to her as one of consolatory privilege.

* * * *

As a matter of personal principle, I decline to answer your callous, impertinent, officious questions beginning with: "Should he go to her and ask for a divorce or just make her so angry she will 'kick him out?'" I should consider myself an ignoble accomplice to an infamous conspiracy against a woman already despicably used if I were to suggest ways and means for this husband to obtain a divorce from this wife.

* * * *

It is for this husband, if, as and when he decides—without undue outside pressure (in the form of busybody assistance, interference and direction from you)—that he wants a divorce, to find out just what such a solution of his situation is going to cost him, in terms of attorneys' fees, alimony allowance, etc. I am not a divorce lawyer, I do not cite nor publicize divorce mills, nor do I collaborate with a love pirate such as yourself in prying a husband loose—the quickest way, at least cost, on most plausible grounds—from his marital moorings.

* * * *

I might add, in conclusion, that I have no respect whatsoever for the man in such a situation who would leave it to the "other woman" to scour the underbrush in search of the route which might lead to their legalized union, even supposing the latter is what he wants. And I feel a certain contempt, mingled with pity, for the woman who would voluntarily assume leadership in such a brazen quest. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

Food for children in the summer is essentially no different from their food at any other time of the year. As the old doctor's slogan, which we quoted yesterday, went: "Less to eat and more to drink in the summer," it about sums up all the wisdom of summer diet. The drink may include sweet drinks, like lemonade and pop and fruit juices which furnish easily assimilable energy in the form of simple sugars, and these will furnish the power for all the extra running around and play of the summer months.

The basic principles of a child's diet are:

First, that there shall be plenty of milk. Milk is the fundamental for a growing organism.

Second, eggs. Milk is not a completely perfect food and does not supply all the protein necessary for a growing child. It is also deficient in iron. Eggs supplement meat in these respects.

Should a child have meat? There is no proof that meat is injurious to a child, but it is thought to be specifically heating, so perhaps it had better be cut down or eliminated in the summer. It does not contain as much of the minerals and vitamins as eggs and milk.

Third, vegetables and fruits: For young children pureed vegetables and juices; for older ones, whole vegetables and fruits are must articles. Include a green leafy vegetable and a yellow on alternate days. Potatoes are good for children and are a valuable source of iron and vitamins B and C.

Cereals are an economical source of energy for children—thus good foods summer as well as winter. Whole milk is better on cereals for children than cream. A child does not need too much fat. It is probably better for a child to eat the cereal without sugar. Often when a child demands sugar on his cereal it is because an adult has suggested it to him.

Butter is the most easily digested fat, but it should not be given to children in large quantities because too much fat tends to retard digestion. Just enough butter to go on bread and vegetables is needed.

Should children eat sweets? With a well-balanced diet, including fruits and fruit juice drinks, a child will have all the sugar he needs. Sugar has the quality of blunting the appetite so that foods needed for growth are not eaten. Ordinary white sugar is pure carbohydrate and has no vitamins nor minerals.

Double-Duty Wardrobe Is Good For Travel: It Saves Packing

A Few Smart, Appropriate Costumes Are Much Better Than a Hodgepodge of Clothes That Fill Up Bags and Require Pressing.

SO YOU'VE decided to spend your vacation traveling! But just now you're so perplexed about the clothes you should wear and pack for future use that you're tempted to give up the idea and stay at home.

First of all, decide how much you can spend on your wardrobe. Then shop carefully, keeping in mind that summer traveling clothes should be cool, comfortable, non-crushable wrinkle resistant. And remember it's better to have a few, smart, appropriate costumes that can do double duty than a hodgepodge variety. Too many dresses require too much time packing, unpacking and pressing.

If you are going by train, airplane or automobile, you can be smart and appropriately attired in an ensemble of black silk crepe dress and natural non-crushable linen coat or an action back suit of black Herringbone linen with knitted cotton shirt to match a felt hat. Or you may choose a navy blue sheer with a blouse of light blue, pink, yellow or white. A sleek dark jersey dress, with or without bolero or jacket, is also ideal for travel. Dark tailored prints in silks, crepe or rayon are both cool and practical.

Hat Should Be Small.

Your hat should be small in either felt, straw or cotton, depending upon the material of your dress. A cotton or a felt hat goes well with cotton materials. Either felt or straw may be worn with a sheer, silk, rayon or jersey dress.

As for the remainder of your wardrobe, it should include a bathing suit, a combination active play and spectator sports costume, a pair of beach sandals, one semi-dressy type frock, one evening dress, one pair of evening shoes and one pair of linen sandals that can be worn with all three daytime frocks.

A rough linen-like fabric, denim, hopsacking or sharkskin material made into jacket, skirt, blouse and shorts in print or solid color makes a nifty sports outfit. Washable linen hats and a large beach bag complete the outfit.

Glamor for Evening.

Select one evening dress that has a cape, jacket or bolero. One model comes in white chiffon with long matching cape designed along Grecian lines. Rayon jersey of pure white, fitted at the waist wth wde billowy skirt, is equally smart and practical.

For your afternoon dress choose chiffon, sheer or silk that can be worn with or without a jacket or bolero. This may be solid or print. Prints do not show soil quickly. The same small hat, shoes and pocketbook that you chose for traveling may be worn with this also.

Shirred lastex, printed dressmaker type or sharkskin bathing suit will fill the bill for a swim suit. It may be as expensive or as inexpensive as you choose.

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

By Ida Jean Kain.

IT SEEMS almost inconceivable that anyone could reduce 172 pounds . . . after all, that is more than most of us weigh! But the recent open letter from a reducer who had lost 100 pounds brought an answer by return mail from a Chicagoan who had taken off almost twice that much.

All the promises I can make you about your figure program do not carry as much weight with you as hearing about someone else who has accomplished the seemingly impossible. Here is an excerpt from this account of an amazing weight reduction:

"I read your article on reducing each day and saw in the morning paper that you had received a letter from a lady saying that she had lost 100 pounds through calorie counting and exercise. I wonder what you will think when I tell you that I have lost 172 pounds in 17 months by diet and exercise? My friends cannot believe their eyes. They pass me on the street and do not recognize me. I haven't a wrinkle. I still have more weight to lose, as I now weigh 194 pounds."

There's courage and determination for you! That is the greatest amount of weight I have ever known any one to lose, and I think this record should be a constant reminder to the average reducer that no program is hopeless. Most of you seem to want to lose from 20 to 40 pounds, but you dillydally and wonder whether you can ever get your weight down, while a few of the more courageous ones go right ahead and take off several times as much weight.

With fewer pounds to lose, of course, you cannot hope to average a 10 pounds per month reduction. You have a lower percentage of flabby fat, the kind that comes off rapidly, and such a rate would not be safe for you. Even this successful reducer will find a lessening in her rate of loss as she approaches normal.

If you are more than 15 pounds overweight you should not start a reduction of your weight without first consulting your doctor, and while losing a considerable amount of weight you should have your doctor check you over at regular intervals.

Balanced Diet, Consistent Exercise Will Produce Results.

There are two good reasons why this particular reducer could lose so much weight without showing strain and wrinkles—she followed a balanced diet and she supplemented her diet with consistent exercises. She exercised every single day, and she did it to music, which she said made exercise fun!

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, July 13.

STRANGE things can happen when a reporter misses the bus—like the time Therese Bonney and I were late for the press car and by a fabulous set of circumstances found ourselves within 6 feet of President Roosevelt as he laid the cornerstone of the Federal Building of our World's Fair.

ALICE HUGHES

Separated from the journalistic herd, Therese, who is a noted international photographer, and I thumbed a ride on a truck, and were let off directly before the President's own stand. We hopefully held out our passes to a posse of police, soldiers and secret service men—and before we knew it the two of us were marching through a double line of Regular Army troops, and were inspecting the Guard of Honor! Well, we tried to carry it off—Therese hoping they might see the ribbon of the Legion of Honor on her suit jacket, and in no time at all we were in the first row of the stand right in among the newsreel men, who get the choice spots at such didos!

There we were—completely out of order and loving it, surrounded by cameras, Mrs. Roosevelt, Gov. Lehman, Mayor LaGuardia and the rest of the official nabobs. The President himself arrived as the tooters tooted "Hail to the Chief," and so we had a front-row seat for the ceremonies and the speeches while our fellow reporters gave us dirty looks from a distance.

The funny part of it was the the soldiers and White House fly-cops realized as well as we that we didn't quite belong at the ringside, and while they were all most courteous, they also kept weather eyes on the two intruding females. Our particular Secret Service man gave me a sharp glare every time I went into the handbag for a hanky or a compact. How did he know but what I had a hand grenade? So it was a mighty exciting afternoon, and while it would be silly to advise tardiness, it worked out well once for two ditherers!

* * * *

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—"Love me, love my little wife," is the motto of John Barrymore, these days. Producer Brock Pemberton tells me that Jawn has advised him that the actor won't come back to Broadway in the fall unless there is a good part in the show for the little woman, Mrs. Elaine Jacobs Barrie Barrymore. And that's the strange mating we all snickered at a couple of years ago! Just teaches us all over again to watch our giggles carefully, but we never learn.

* * * *

This town is heat-daffy. It is actually trying to keep clean! The scrub-up wave struck filthy, littered Broadway a few weeks ago, and now Mrs. George Dixon, who runs a fancy beauty shoppey on the avenue, is stirring up the neighbors to shine up the famous shopping street. Highly laudable, but trying to keep midtown Gotham clean is a problem as tough as that of a white Persian kitten in a coalbin.

The GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay.

Old Cow's Tail.

I.

I got a neat little suit with a lot of fresh blouses,
To "see me through summer," but by the time it was fitted,
Everyone was in prints.
So after much foot work I got fixed up again,
With a loud Cubist pattern, then to my amazement,
Found that white and pastels,
Were the things "they" were wearing.
So then by late June, when with my tongue hanging,
I got nicely rigged out in a symphony pale,
My friends all were "peasants."

II.

After the Fourth of July, I had fully determined,
No one should catch me downtown in white trappings,
Like a hick from the sticks.
So I got a black sheer with smart touches of white,
Now I find that is not nearly warm enough for July,
I must have crepe or satin.
Now here is my trouble—if I hunt a new silk,
Before I can find it, and get things to suit,
All my rivals and enemies will be cutting a swath,
In fall wools in August.

III.

I thought I was very alert and forehanded,
In getting my new black gabardine oxfords,
So long before Easter.
But before they were scarcely broken into my feet,
Everybody who was anybody had brown and white kids.
Or virginal sandals.
And oxfords were "out," so the salesmen all told me,
So now that I've mortgaged the farm for white slippers,
The late summer shoes are black velvety suedes,
Just to predate fall leathers.

IV.

I searched long weary hours for a hat that would suit me,
Found a trim little model, but before I could wear it,
Everyone was in leghorns.
So I got a broad brim to keep out the sun's glare,
But now from the shop window signs, I'm convinced
It has the mark of the country.
The "fashion-wise" woman, so the style experts say,
Wears a doll's hat of felt perched over one eye,
And as soon as that's over—by August at least,
The velvet berets will supplant it.

V.

I got daring and bold and bought dusty pink gloves,
But before they were ready to go to the cleaner,
My friends wore white doeskins.
And summer was here, so I got soft white fabric,
But I had to discard them, for string was "the thing."
They said at the counters.
And now that I've got a thin pair of crochets,
I notice the women who are all up to snuff
In those unerring touches that go to make smartness,
Are wearing black suedes.

VI.

I'm sick of this thing of being always behind,
Like a virgin shut out with her unlighted taper,
From the bridal feast of smartness.
I must do something quick, but what can it be?
I might shop for fall things, but I'd still be too late,
To get ahead of my rivals.
There's winter ahead, but the fur coats in August,
Will settle all that; I must do something smarter,
Ah, I know! I'll start right in now looking around
For a hat for next Easter!

Sweaters and Jackets Still Par on Style Links

Paris (U.P.).—The inevitable sweaters and jackets for golf wear are much the same as in previous seasons, with the coat-sweater well in the lead. Chamois, however, takes a dressy turn at Piguet's, where a chamois jacket has a few decorative rows of drawn work around its bottom. The same house features a completely practical slipover of navy and white horizontally striped jersey. The slipover slips down well below the hips, is beltless, has an emerald green scarf tucked in its neck, and is worn with a white wool flared skirt.

Proper Order For Procession Of Bride Given

By Margaret Wallace.

THE ARRANGEMENT of a wedding procession often presents a problem to a bride, especially if she has many attendants. One young woman who requests advice on this subject writes:

"I will have six bridesmaids, a maid of honor and there will be six ushers. My father will escort me. The wedding is to be in a church with a wide center aisle. How should the procession be formed?"

The Answer.

The ushers walk in pairs in front of the processional followed by the bridesmaids walking two by two. The maid of honor walks alone directly in front of the bride who is escorted by her father with her left hand on his right arm.

When the bride reaches the head of the aisle where the bridegroom is waiting with his best man, she withdraws her left hand from her father's arm and places it in the hand of the groom if the ceremony calls for this procedure. If not she stands by the side of the groom. She has been carrying her bouquet on her right arm and shifts it to her left arm before she takes her place by the groom. The father of the bride stands near until he makes the response and the maid of honor stands at the rear and to the left of the bride. The best man should be a pace to the rear and to the right of the bridegroom.

Attendants Divided.

As each pair of the other attendants in the procession reach the end of the aisle, they should divide with the bridesmaids standing in front of the ushers.

At the recessional, the bride and groom walk first with the bride on her husband's arm. They should be followed by the maid of honor walking alone or with the best man. Then should come the bridesmaids and then the ushers. At some weddings the bridesmaids are escorted by the ushers.

It is very bad form for any of the guests to leave their seats before the bride's mother and father and the groom's mother and father have passed down the aisle, although it is not absolutely necessary to wait until all the relatives have left.

Guests should give the bridal party time to leave the church before they crowd forward; because there is something very awkward about the guests standing around while the bride and groom and attendants find their places in the automobiles to be taken to the home for the reception. Congratulations should be reserved for the wedding reception.

Argentina's Officers and Midshipmen Here Are Initiated Into Washington's Social Life

Luncheon at Pan American Annex Given by Mr. Rowe Is Followed by Tea Dance at Army-Navy Country Club With Leahys as Hosts.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

Argentina ruled the social wave here yesterday when officers and midshipmen of the training ship Presidente Sarmiento were feted at two major functions—a tea dance at the Army Navy Country Club and a luncheon at the Pan American Union.

From 6 until 8 o'clock in the evening, the visitors, trimly turned out in their white uniforms, met and mingled with United States Navy officials and members of the younger set . . . danced and dipped . . . smiled and bowed . . . and, in general, made themselves useful as well as oramental at the tea dance given in their honor.

HOPE R. MILLER.

The Chief of Naval Operations, Admiral William D. Leahy and Mrs. Leahy, as host and hostess for the event, received almost 300 guests at the door of the spacious ballroom. Mrs. Leahy wore a simple frock of blue and red mingled batiste, a wide-brimmed white hat and white accessories. Also in the receiving line were the Argentine Ambassador, Felipe Espil; Commander Luis Malerba, of the Presidente Sarmiento, and Senora de Sueyro, wife of the naval attache of the Argentine Embassy. She wore a white crepe dress with a large white hat, white gloves and white shoes.

Very much in evidence in the decorations were the Stars and Stripes and the Argentine flag—white and celeste blue, centered with the "rising sun." Adding further notes of color to the rooms of the club were masses of summer flowers artistically arranged in huge vases. As attractive as the inside of the club was, however, many guests—particularly the Argentines—spent a good part of their time outside inspecting the swimming pool, the tennis courts, and the cool terrace.

Navy Orchestra Is in Top Form

Meanwhile, inside dancing got under way shortly after the party began. The Navy Band Orchestra, resplendent in summer whites, played its liveliest tunes, punctuating the dance selections with occasional patriotic pieces. The Argentine tango vied with the "ibg apple" in centering the spotlight of attention, and before the dance was over it seemed both visitors and natives had ample orportunity to learn several new steps.

A long tea table was spread in the dining room, where a number of guests who preferred chatting to dancing stayed most of the time. The more popular procedure, however, was to spin through one number in the ballroom, then slip away to the dining room for refreshments, returning presently to dance again.

Guests in addition to the visiting officers and midshipmen included a number of debutantes and sub-debutantes, high ranking Navy officials and members of their families, all members of the Argentine Embassy staff who are in town, and a scattering of residential Washingtonians.

Dr. L. S. Rowe Is Luncheon Host

Dr. L. S. Rowe, director general of the Pan American Union, started the social ball rolling for the visitors when he entertained at luncheon yesterday. The party took place in the Pan American Annex, which was appropriately decorated with Argentine flags and gay summer bouquets.

Guests included Commander Luis S. Malerba of the Presidente Sarmientoff; the Argentine Ambassador, Felipe A. Espil; Capt. Saba H. Sueyro, Naval Attache of the Embassy; Ricardo J. Siri, Second Secretary of the embassy and Miguel E. Quirno-Lavalle, Commercial Attache.

Members of the Argentine Naval Commission in the company were Commander Victor M. Padula, Lieut. Comdr. Dante J. Barzana, Lieut. Luis G. Lamanna, Segundo E. Vallejo and Lieut. Rogelio R. Alcantara. Other luncheon guests were Alfredo Louro, of Argentina; Col. Robert Blake and Lieut. J. A. Butler, of the United States Navy; the Assistant Director of the Pan American Union, Dr. Pedro de Alba; Dr. William Manger, Counselor, and Charles K. Ludewig, chief of the division of financial and economic information of the Pan American Union.

Yesterday morning and early yesterday afternoon Commander Malerba and other officers of the training ship visited the State, War and Navy departments. Accompanied by the Argentine Ambassador and Capt. Sueyro, they were received by Secretary Hull and Undersecretary Sumner Welles at the State Department.

At the Navy Department they visited Acting Secretary of the Navy Charles Edison, Admiral Leahy and Rear Admiral Ralston S. Holmes, director of Naval Intelligence. Gen. Malin Craig, Chief of Staff and Acting Secretary of War, received the group at the War Department.

The concert at the Pan American Union tonight and the reception at the Mayflower tomorrow will wind up the Capital's social calender for the visitors.

Fair Weather Yesterday For Argentines

Underwood & Underwood.

The sun shone yesterday on the officers and midshipmen of the training ship Presidente Sarmiento, when they were entertained at a tea dance given by Admiral and Mrs. William D. Leahy. C. M. Yates, U. S. N.; Miss Nancy Williard, daughter of Capt. F. A. Ramsey, U. S. M. C., and Joroe A. Bassi, also of the Presidente Sarmiento.

Horse Exhibit Beckons Many To Hot Springs

Show Will Be Held August 11 and 12; Night Session Is Indicated.

From Hot Springs, Va., comes word that entries are already beginning to come in for the eleventh annual Bath County Horse Show August 11 and 12.

The program lists 53 classes, including four championship classes. Indications are that a night session will be necessary on August 11 in order to complete the show in the two days allotted by the American Horse Show Association.

Mrs. George A. Ellis, of New York, has presented a new trophy for the winner of the five-gaited class in the saddle classes championship. It must be won three times by the same exhibitor before becoming his property. Last year's saddle classes champion Princess Roe, owned by Oscar F. Smith, of Norfolk, automatically has a leg on this new trophy.

Proceeeds to Go To Hospital.

Proceeds of the event will go to the Community House Hospital at Hot Springs. For several years the show has been enthusiastically supported by summer colonists, who have donated many valuable trophies.

The trophy for the three-gaited type, saddle championship, was presented in 1936 by Mrs. William Clark, of Princeton, N. J. L. S. Gosnell, of Latrobe, Pa., won a leg on this award with Golden Nugget. Mrs. Loomis L. White, of Shrewsbury, N. J., is donor of the Breeding Championship Trophy, Miss Eliza Wolff, of New York, presented the Hunter Championship Trophy in 1935.

All the championship trophies must be won three times by the same exhibitor for permanent possession. Mrs. Fay Ingalls, of New York and Hot Springs, won the Hunter Championship Trophy in 1936, and George G. Lee, of Berryville, Va., won it in 1937.

Many Recent Additions To Homestead Colony.

Italian Envoy Gives Dinner

The Italian Ambassador, Fulvio de Suvich, entertained about 100 guests at a stag dinner last evening at the embassy. The list was made up of Government officials and members of the press.

Sara P. Dodge Art in Display At Georgetown

Summer Exhibitions of Wide Interest; New Show Starts Monday.

Of wide interest in social as well as artistic circles is the schedule of summer exhibitions at the Georgetown Galleries. For the past two weeks, scores of notables have visited the show, in which several pictures by Sara Pryor Dodge (Mrs. Hunter Kimbrough) have been on display. The exhibition in which she has had a part will close this week, but another will open shortly afterward.

A preview of the new exhibition will be held on Monday evening from 8 to 10 o'clock. Theodora Kane, wife of Maj. Norman Kane, and Miss Bobbie Gladys Kerr, directors of the Georgetown Galleries will receive at preview. Assisting them will be Miss Eleanor Wells.

Local Landscapes To Be Displayed.

The exhibition will include recent works of a number of artists all of whom are residents of the District of Columbia, Maryland or Virginia. The paintings, both oils and water colors, are local landscapes. Titles in the catalogue indicate Washington has many scenes that appeal to the artistic eye, and a number of local painters do not find it necessary to go far afield for inspiration.

William H. Calfee, whose murals are in the postoffice at Petersburg, Va., will be represented in the exhibition by a scene depicting a typical Washington alley in winter. Alexander Clayton will show an autumn scene at Dunlop Farm. Mrs. Kane and Miss Kerr have included some of their own recent work in the show.

In selecting all canvases for the show, they have taken special care to choose from the standpoint of both local landscape interest and decorative point of view. In each instance, directors have kept in mind also the choice of pictures of high standard but of moderate price.

Many Painters To Be Represented.

Many of the exhibiting artists have been pupils of Eugene Weinz, popular Washington teacher and vice president of the Corcoran School of Art. Among painters who will be presented in the show are Suzanne M. Mullett, Emilie M. Arlt, Petrina Wood, M. Lee Abbott, Marguerite Riley, Martha Moffett Bache, Paul Arlt, Louis P. Croft, Robert Boudinot, Mary Ruth Snow, Zelda Hirsch, Harriet Westcott Hill, Elizabeth Ogilby.

Also, Etta D. Matz, Alexander Clayton, Helen B. Goodwin, Jo Kenealy Byrne, Louis K. Hilbert, W. Lee Atkyns, jr., Emily P. Smith, John Taylor, Forrest Cromwell, Ellen Donch Howes, E. M. Rust, Howard Eugene Chapman and J. Crozier Galloway.

The galleries are free to the public at all times and open daily from 11 a. m. to 6 p. m., and on Sunday afternoon from 3 to 6 o'clock. The current show will be on view until September 5.

D.C. Woman Takes Zonta Song Prize

Mrs. Stambaugh Declared Winner at Picnic of Miss Hahn.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Miss Emma T. Hahm, president of the Zonta Club of Washington, last night announced Mrs. Louise Stambaugh, of the local club, as winner of the contest for a new Zonta song, conducted by the international organization. Miss Hahm made the announcement as part of her convention report at a picnic on her estate on Daniels road. She presented Mrs. Stambaugh with the $15 prize she had brought for her from the convention in Banff, Canada, from which Miss Hahm has just returned.

Another honor which came to the Washington club at the convention was the election of one of its members, Mrs. May Moyers McElroy, as international first vice president. Mrs. McElroy was not present to receive congratulations last night as she went from Banff to California for a visit before returning East. Jane Bartlett, a former president of the Washington club, who now lives in Boston, accompanied her. Miss Elizabeth Haney, of Washington, arranged the transportation for the 135 delegates who went by special train.

Zonta International has shown steady growth during the past five years despite the depression, Miss Hahm told the club members, bringing news from the Banff convention. Its membership has grown from 3,000 to 4,000 with the addition of 31 new clubs and three reorganized.

Amelia Earhart Memorial Planned

The Zontians voted as a memorial to Amelia Earhart, who was a member of the New York City club, a scholarship for the study of aeronautics. It will be a loan fund, intended to assist young women interested in the engineering end of flying rather than in merely training as pilots. It is to be repaid as they are able, without interest, and Purdue University, which sponsored Miss Earhart's last flight, will be given the preference, although students will not be restricted to study there.

The Washington Zontians maintain a local scholarship fund for aiding young women in completing their education for a business or profession. Many other clubs have similar service projects.

Made Trip to Toronto by Motor

Miss Hahm and Mrs. John L. Stewart, who accompanied her, motored to Toronto and from there went by train to Banff. They met there the retiring and incoming presidents of Rotary International for Great Britain and Ireland and arranged to have them included among the guests at the first convention luncheon at which the Zontians were entertaining the Banff Rotarians. The British Rotary officers were among 100 delegates from abroad who were there on their way East after attending the Rotary convention in San Francisco.

The picnic last night was hurriedly moved from the beautiful outdoor setting provided by Miss Hahm's garden, to the house owing to the rain. Punch was served on the sunporch which overlooks the garden and is so artistically arranged with ferns, flowers and trailing vines that it simulated the out-of-doors. The buffet supper was served in the dining room and between showers, guests went outside to see the lily pond and the flowers blooming in profusion along the garden walks.

Among those present were Miss Nora Wise, president of the Zonta Club at Frederick, Md., and Miss Hal Ott, past regional director of the Frederick Club, who came to hear of the convention as their delegate could not attend.

Among others present were Dr. Mildred Dickerson, Miss Miriam Birdseye, Mrs. Elizabeth Cox, Mrs. Edith Salisbury, Dr. Edith Seville Coale, Miss Mabel Strider, Miss Florence Thompson, Mrs. Nan Street, Miss Anna Muddiman, Miss Elizabeth Haney, Mrs. Marion Hines Taylor, Dr. Frances Marshall, Dr. Margaret Nicholson, Miss Vera Lundquist, Miss Ruth Sheldon, Miss Mary Sigman, Miss Frances Powell Hill, Mrs. Helen Steinburger, Miss Kathryn Fox, Mrs. Ethel Hess, Miss Alice Terrell, Miss Elizabeth Beresford, Miss Esther Gude, Miss Winifred Burwell, Miss Clara McGrath, Mrs. Frances Gutelius Smith, and Mrs. Alice Fay.

Conventions Still Hold The Spotlight In Washington's Club Programs For Summer

BELOW are Mrs. Elizabeth Cox, vice president of the Washington Zonta Club, Miss Emma T. Hahm, president and delegate to the recent convention at Banff, Canada, and Mrs. Louise Stambaugh, announced as winner of the song contest conducted by Zonta International. They are photographed at the picnic given for the club last night by Miss Hahm. At the right are national officers of Alpha Zeta Beta Sorority, here for the convention opening today at Wardman Park Hotel. Left to right, Leila Lea Crevolin, of El Monte, Calif., vice president; Marion E. Martin, of Rutledge, Pa., president, and Mil Schlipf, of Toledo, Ohio, treasurer.

Women's Farm Association Entertained in Charlottesville

National and District Presidents Give Luncheon for Members Remaining for Council Meeting After U. of Va. Institute Session.

Mrs. Murray Boocock, president of the Woman's National Farm and Garden Association, and Mrs. Jay Winston Johns, president of the Capital Division, both residents of Charlottesville, Va., yesterday entertained at luncheon for members of the organization who remained over for a council meeting following the Tuesday program of the Institute of Public Affairs at the University of Virginia. The program on that day was sponsored by the association and in charge of Mrs. Charlotte Barrell Ware, of Boston, chairman of international co-operation who is stopping in Washington on her return to New England.

Charles L. Brand, chairman of the American committee on the International Institute of Agriculture in Rome, in his address at the institute Tuesday, declared there was "no better way to bring about peace and co-operation than by such organizations as the Associated Country Women of the World."

Mrs. Ware announced 110 farm women in the Middle West had signified their intention of attending the London Conference next summer and that 50 others, most of them teachers of adult education, also have said they would go.

Miss Grace Frysinger, senior home economist in the Department of Agriculture, is chairman for North America of the Associated Country Women of the World and is working toward the London conference, which will be the first since 1936, when nearly 6,000 women visited Washington from all parts of the world.

The discussion at the institute during a forum on the work of the Farm and Garden Association, dealt with the question of whether the roadside markets should sell for more or less than town merchants, and also the problem presented by the sale of articles purchased in town and displayed at stands along the countryside. The Farm and Garden Association hopes to encourage handicraft and farm enterprises among country women through which they may add to the family income. All farm markets sponsored by the association are therefore strictly for the sale of actual farm products. The insignia of the association is to be prominently placed on signs for such markets, it was decided, as a guarantee to the public that what was sold represented the produce of the locality.

Mrs. Allie L. Hopkins, of Michigan, State chairman of the American Home for the Michigan Federation of Women's Clubs, said the farm women looked to the association to learn what the public wants. They can then gauge whether it would be more profitable to make jellies, preserves, cakes, hooked rugs, or to raise poultry.

Bedtime Stories

By Thornton W. Burgess.

The Accident.

Accidents will happen, yes;
But they come from carelessness.
—Old Mother Nature.

With that he trotted off down an old cowpath in the Old Pasture.

They called him The Careless One, this son of Reddy Fox. Everybody called him that. It became his name. If he had another no one knew it, for this name just fitted him. He was not stupid, not dull of wit, this young Fox just starting out in the Great World. Indeed, he was quite the reverse. But he was careless. He always had been careless, even from the time when he was a very little roly-poly cub.

"I hope he'll outgrow it," his mother had said over and over again.

"If he doesn't, he isn't likely to live long," Reddy Fox replied, shaking his head dubiously.

But somehow The Careless One had lived to reach the age when the law of Mother Nature decreed that he should start out for himself in the Great World, leaving home and parents, even the familiar scenes where he had learned to hunt and catch his food. That is a law that all young must obey and do obey. It is a wise law, as are all the laws of Old Mother Nature. You see the wisdom of it. Of course you do. Reddy and Mrs. Reddy have made a home and within a certain distance around that home they can and do get their living. At times food is plentiful, but at other times they have hard work to get enough to eat. Now if their children should make their homes in the same locality there wouldn't be food enough for all. So the children, having the desire to go forth and see the Great World and to be free to do as they please, leave home as soon as they are big enough. It is the same way with the children of other furred folk and feathered folk as well.

Of course the better trained the youngsters are when they start out the better are their chances to live long. Reddy and Mrs. Reddy had done their best to train their children as young Foxes should be trained insofar as training went all were ready to go out into the Great World when the time came. Only over The Careless One did Reddy and Mrs. Reddy shake their heads. He was as well trained as the others, but he was still careless and his carelessness never appeared to worry him in the least.

"Don't worry about me," said he in his happy-go-lucky way. "Nothing is going to happen to me. I can take care of myself."

With that he trotted off down an old cowpath in the Old Pasture and disappeared. He decided that he would first visit the alder swamp, through which the Laughing Brook enters the Smiling Pool. He had been over there once or twice before, so that he was quite familiar with it. He knew that Longbill the Woodcock and Mrs. Longbill lived there. Either one would make an excellent meal on which to start out in the Great World. He had tried on previous visits to catch one of them but was not at all discouraged because he had failed. Already he had learned that as a rule for every success there must be many failures.

When he reached the swamp he began to move slowly and cautiously, ears cocked, eyes alert, nose lifted to catch the faintest telltale scent. Did you ever see a hunting Dog zig-zag back and forth across a field hunting for scene of game? It is called quartering. Well, in just that way the young Fox was quartering that swamp and all the time he was working up-wind. That is, he was moving in the direction from which the wind, what little there was of it, was coming. This was so that if there was any scent of anybody the wind would bring it to him.

He had about given up hope of finding either of the Longbills when right across in front of him bounded a half-grown son of Jumper the Hare. The young Fox forgot the Longbills. In a flash he was after the young Hare. Forgotten was everything but the chase. Had it been Jumper ahead of him the young Fox would have known that chasing him would prove a waste of time, but this was a young Hare with neither the speed nor the skill in dodging of his father. Soon the young Fox was almost at the heels of the young Hare and, without looking to see where he would land, he made a long jump. He missed the Hare and landed rather heavily on a tangle of roots. One hind foot slipped down between them. He sprung two of these roots apart and coudn't pull it out. He was a prisoner.

$140,000 Is Set As 1939 Budget By Club Women

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Grand Rapids, Mich., July 13.—Adopting a budget of $140,000 for the year ahead, leaders of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs in annual meeting today went ahead on plans for furthering the organization's legislative program and field service.

Mrs. Marion Britt, of Washington, legislative worker, will begin on December 1 to carry out the legislative program adopted yesterday. A staff of three field workers will be employed in the year ahead to service the field, aid in the organization of new clubs, stabilization of membership and interpretation of the Federal program.

Mrs. Helen Kidd Thompson, of Greenville, Pa., chairman of the membership committee, announced that Ohio is the all-star membership State for the year just ended. It measured up on all four counts—more clubs than last year, more members, no clubs lost, and turnover less than 20 per cent. Sixteen States rated on 3 points in the membership contest.

Members of the executive committee in charge of the board meeting include Miss Earlene White, of Washington, national president; Mrs. Rosa E. Cunningham, of Des Moines, Iowa, first vice president; Mrs. Myra A. Blakeslee, of East Orange, N. J., third vice president; Miss Celia M. Howard, of Chicago, recording secretary, and Miss Isabelle Claridge, of Wheeling, W. Va., treasurer.

*X WASHINGTON: THURSDAY, JULY 14, 1938 17

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

Imlay, Nev., July 13, 1938.

One of the more unusual precautions so far was the rerouting of a passenger plane due to fly over a park where President Roosevelt was making a speech. Local authorities ordered the pilot to fly several miles to one side, to safeguard the crowd as well as the President against the billionth chance of an accident.

Anna Boettiger.

* * * *

Otherwise, except for the coaling of the train by hand, the secret service precautions are routine and not nearly so drastic, as, for example, the minute policing of the route during Herbert Hoover's campaign trips in 1932. There are thirteen secret service men with the train, the same number carried on all trips, plus a few who join the party along the route.

* * * *

At one stop the roofs of buildings near the track were kept clear, and a policeman or two were on guard against the skyline. But at all other stops the roofs have been jammed with hundreds of people, perilously sitting on the edges with their feet hanging over, jostled by others behind them.

"The pick and shovel ovation."

In the wee small hours, about 4:30 a. m., John and Anna Boettiger boarded the train at Salt Lake City to join their father-in-law and father. They were up before 10 o'clock breakfasting at the Presidential end of the diner with poker-faced Chip Robert, of the Democratical National Committee, and Steve Early, the President's secretary.

* * * *

The President's daughter, in a simple black dress, was gay and vivacious despite a broken night's sleep. She resembles Elliott more than her other brothers and has her mother's stamina, not to mention her father's.

* * * *

It is difficult to explain why several hundred thousand people at one town give the President a tumultuous reception, while several thousand people at another station are hypnotized by curiosity almost to the point of somnolence. F. D. R. himself reacts noticably to the receptions; where the shouting is loud, quick and spontaneous his extemporaneous remarks are more jovial. Some of his best ovations have come from the pick-and-shovel squads along the right of way.

* * * *

Though it may seem fantastic to those who color every move of the President with Machiavellian political motives, it is fairly plausible that this trip was routed as much to permit him to spend a day or two with his son in Texas and with his daughter in this region as to allow him to say "Bless you, little man" to a score of New Deal lawmakers.

* * * *

In another Administration, his friendly allusions to local members of Congress would have seemed routine and perfunctory, and almost obligatory in most instances, from a President passing through. Viewed through realistic lenses, his only high voltage endorsement, more than perfunctory, was for Barkley in Kentucky—in several other States the local politicos were forced to put on considerable pressure to augment the Presidential curtsy by a few words.

"Traces of the Old West."

During the last 24 hours there have been a few cow ponies tied up at the depots, a few Indians in working clothes, a few natives dressed up for the occasion in frontier costumes. The men seemed in spots to be a little taller, more rawboned and bronzed. Otherwise the population in a 3,000-mile jaunt seems homogeneous, except for a trifling widening of hat brims the last 1,000 miles.

* * * *

At the station in Grand Junction last night a phone was plugged into the President's car at the rear end and he chatted a few minutes with Harry Hopkins in Washington. Word filtered forward that Hopkins had told him that Senator Elmer Thomas had a good lead in the Oklahoma primary—as the report spread from compartment to compartment, the margin increased. In compartment C of car three, it was 20,000; in D of car four it reached 50,000. By the time the news reached the club car near the front end it was 100,000.

* * * *

Slip-up Jams Mental Cases At Gallinger

By Gerald G. Gross

St. Elizabeths Hospital is underpopulated today while its "feeder," the psychopathic ward at Gallinger Hospital, is facing the worst congestion it has known in years.

Officials conceded yesterday the situation is one of the strangest the two institutions have ever had to meet.

Five weeks ago President Roosevelt signed the bill creating the Commission on Mental Health. A few days previously District Court had made its last commitments to St. Elizabeths under the old system of jury trial.

Not until the last week in June, however, when the second deficiency bill was signed, did funds become available for the commission to begin work. Consequently, there hasn't been a person sent to St. Elizabeths from Gallinger for more than a month and the resultant jam at the latter institution had Dr. Joseph L. Gilbert, chief of psychiatric service, very much worried.

170 in Ward.

"There are about 170 patients in the ward, which is far above normal, but figures don't tell the story," he said. "Many of these are disturbed cases which, under the old system, could have been sent to St. Elizabeths on temporary commitments within a few days after they came to us.

"Gallinger can properly accommodate disturbed and dangerous cases for a limited time, but over a period of weeks—well, it becomes pretty uncomfortable for both patients and personnel."

On the other hand, Superintendent Winfred Overholser of St. Elizabeths Hospital was impressed by the sudden census drop there. The only District patient he has received since June 8, when commitments ordered by the court on June 3 were transferred, is one who had been released as "improved," then had to be returned to the institution.

The "middle man" is T. Gillespie Walsh, chairman and law member of the Commission on Mental Health.

"The backing up problem at Gallinger is serious, but it will be cleared up in a few weeks," he said. "The commission has held four hearings and there will be another on Friday. We have made our recommendations in a number of cases and the first commitments by the court may be expected next Tuesday or Wednesday."

Cites Time Limits.

Delay in enactment of the deficiency bill and the law's safeguard clauses which provide that three business days must elapse before a hearing may be held on a commitment petition and at least ten days must separate commission action and the actual commitment—these are the main reasons for the present jam, Walsh said.

"Another thing which, I believe, has aggravated the condition is the large number of cranks and eccentrics who were attracted to Washington during the last days of Congress, when millions were made available for work-relief.

"They went to the White House and various departments to tell how the money should be spent, and were promptly brought to Gallinger for observation. Some of them probably would be in St. Elizabeths now but for the commission's unavoidable delay in beginning to function."

Walsh, a former assistant corporation counsel, and L. P. Stump, executive secretary of the commission, said the commission's method of conducting hearings has been praised by many relatives of prospective patients.

Physician members of the board for the initial quarter are Drs. H. D. Shapiro and Albert E. Marland. Offices have been set up in the old Police Court Building at 515 D street northwest.

Montgomery Club Formed for Sasscer

Montgomery County Democrats last night organized a "Sasscer for Governor" campaign club, with James W. Cummings and Mrs. Dorothy S. Staples as cochairmen in a meeting at the Bethesda Woman's Club.

Senator Lansdale Sasscer, who is seeking the Democratic nomination, attended the meeting and outlined plans for a State-wide campaign designed to steer clear of local factional fights.

Other officers of the campaign club are Mrs. Alfred J. Steffens, secretary, and Joseph Bowie, treasurer. Cummings announced Sasscer would speak at a county rally July 23 in the Silver Spring Armory.

Sailor's Son Seeks Hound of Father Who Died in Fla.

William McFarland, jr., of 1827 Park road northwest, wants to find his beagle hound "Flapper" for sentimental reasons.

"Flapper" was the boon companion of his father, Chief Boatswain's Mate William McFarland, sr., U. S. N., retired, who died last week at 60 in Jensen, Fla. Mr. McFarland served in the Navy 30 years, and participated in the Spanish-American and World wars. He treasured "Flapper," as does his grief-stricken wife, who is ill, and does not know the dog is gone.

The gray-spotted canine, with brown ears, disappeared from McFarland's home yesterday. He has asked police to help him in his search, and has offered a reward for the dog's recovery.

Meanwhile rites for his father will be held at the Chambers undertaking establishment Saturday at 10 a. m., followed by burial in Arlington Cemetery.

John Weber Rites Tomorrow; Was In Bakers' Union

Funeral services for John Weber, 76, reputedly sole surviving charter member of the International Bakers' Union, will be held in the Huntemann undertaking establishment tomorrow at 1:30 p. m., followed by burial in Prospect Hill Cemetery.

Mr. Weber died Tuesday at his residence, 620 Nicholson street northwest, after an illness of several weeks. For years prior to his retirement six years ago he was office manager here for the Bakers' Union. In 1936 he was honored at the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the I. B. U. in a celebration at Pittsburgh.

A native of Germany, Mr. Weber had lived most of his life in Washington. He was a past master of Arminius Lodge of Masons and also belonged to Mount Horeb Chapter, Royal Arch Masons.

Surviving Mr. Weber are a daughter, Mrs. Lillie W. Werntz; two sons, John A. and Henry Weber, and five grandchildren, all of Washington.

3 Government Departments To Be Honored by Symphony

Federal Officials to Make Addresses on Each of Special Nights.

Three of the largest Government departments—Agriculture, Treasury and Interior—will be honored with special "departmental nights" in the series of Summer Water Gate concerts presented by the National Symphony Orchestra, it was announced last night.

High officials of the various departments are expected to make brief addresses on each of the three nights. "Agriculture night," at which the Department of Agriculture chorus is tentatively scheduled to sing, will be July 31. The Treasury will be honored August 3 and Interior August 10. Secretary Ickes has indicated he may give a short talk on "Interior night."

Reginald Stewart, conductor of the Toronto Promenade Concerts, will direct the first two concerts, while William van Hoogstraten will lead the third.

It is understood that the "departmental concerts" are being given in special recognition of the support afforded the orchestra by Federal employes. On each of the three nights, large sections of seats will be reserved for the departments. Intra-departmental groups are being organized to stimulate sale of tickets.

The official National Symphony flag, it was announced yesterday, will be orange-yellow with five red stripes. In the center, on a blue background surrounded by green olive branches, will be a device in gold with figures representing the wind, stringed and percussion instruments of the symphony orchestra.

W. Kingsley Utteridge, of 2221 Fortieth place northwest, designed the flag and won the contest sponsored by the orchestra association. Second prize in the contest went to Ruth Miles, of 4600 Reno road northwest, and third prize to Francis D. Flanagan, of 1319 Thirty-fifth street northwest.

The flag will be raised for the first time at the July 20 Water Gate Concert.

Colored Death Rate Depicted in Movie

District Tuberculosis Association officials watched a preview of a motion picture entitled "Let My People Live." The picture deals with the colored death rate from tuberculosis and methods to prevent it.

Same Tickets Good For Concert Tonight

The outdoor concert program postponed last night because of rain, will be presented under direction of Hans Kindler at 8 tonight at the Watergate.

Tickets issued for last night's program will be good tonight without exchange, but if the weather forces a second postponement, tickets either will be refunded or exchanged for a later concert.

Officials of the summer festival committee announced about 500 extra seats had been placed in the unreserved section, and that the concert barge had been moved out 20 feet to a point 50 feet from the shore line.

The program includes Burleske, by Richard Strauss, with Dorothy Kemp Roosevelt as piano soloist; Toccata, by Frescobaldi; Symphony in A major, by Mozart; Pines of Rome, by Respighi, and two numbers which will be announced from the platform by Dr. Kindler.

Drifting Log Damages S. S. Potomac Wheel

The ship was docked at Alexandria where repairs were quickly made, officials of the Potomac River Line said.

Veteran Robbed Of $60; Man Held In Rockville Jail

Anthony Sprosky, 51, World War veteran, was slugged and robbed of $60 near Neelsville, Md., by a young white man who offered to drive him from Washington to his home in Dubois, Pa., early yesterday.

Sprosky told Montgomery County police he was released from Mount Alto Hospital Tuesday, and later met his assailant in a restaurant on Ninth street. The man offered him a ride home, and at Neelsville, Sprosky reported, the man knocked him out with a blow on the jaw and robbed him.

Later Milburn Sheppard, 30, of Germantown, was charged by Montgomery County police with assault and robbery and held at the county jail in Rockville under $1,000 bond when, police said, he admitted slugging Sprosky and running away because he thought he had killed him.

Sheppard was arrested after investigation by Sergt. Joseph Nolte and Officers Alton Harding and Marion Dayhoff.

District Warned To Dine Sparingly Through Summer

Health Officer George C. Ruhland yesterday warned Washingtonians to watch their diets during these hot days.

"Eat sparingly and include only the foods which you know agree with you on the hottest days," he advised. "You will feel better and prevent many stomach derangements."

Dr. Ruhland also warned housewives to keep meat in refrigerators and cook it as soon as possible, not to allow milk bottles to remain long on the doorstep, and to caution children against eating unripe or over-ripe fruits.

"Give your refrigerator a thermometer test to make sure that it is 50 degrees or under," he said.

Police Spread Net For 'Rose' Bandit

Police last night spread a city wide net to catch the youthful phantom bandit who has raided through Northwest Washington, leaving a rose as his calling card.

With a partial description, furnished by a druggist with whom the bandit talked for 15 minutes early yesterday, scout cruisers and patrolmen were warned to watch for the phantom to strike in any section of the city.

Described as a former convict, the rose bandit was believed by police to be the nephew of a notorious Washington gambler.

John E. Moore, 80, Ex-Druggist, Dies

John E. Moore, 80, 1301 Fairmont street northwest, retired druggist, died yesterday at Garfield Hospital, following a brief illness.

A native of Washington, Mr. Moore entered the drug business with his father as a boy. He retired more than 20 years ago. He had been active in the Fourth Presbyterian Church.

He leaves three sisters, Mrs. L. G. Orndorff, Dr. Rosalind Moore Bain, of Washington, and Mrs. H. C. Dodge, Fort Bayard, N. Mex., and three brothers, Thomas P. and William N. Moore, of Washington, and Dr. P. Moore, of New York City.

Funeral services will be held at 11 a. m. tomorrow in the Hines funeral home, 2901 Fourteenth street northwest, with burial in Oak Hill Cemetery.

Four Doctors Are Added to G. H. A. Staff

Increased Membership Spurs Expansion, New Hospital.

Enlargements of the medical staff of Group Health Association from 7 to 11 physicians was announced yesterday by William C. Kirkpatrick, president.

"A larger medical staff has been necessitated by the growth of the association," he said. "At the time our clinic opened last fall the membership of the organization was only 850. Since then it has grown to 2,800."

Kirkpatrick added that the trustees have definitely decided to provide hospital services for the membership and from other sources it was indicated that G. H. A. plans to extend enrollment privileges to other branches of Government and possibly the general public.

Addition of the four doctors will give the clinic staff 11 doctors and 9 nurses and technicians. Names of the new physicians will be announced later. Their salaries, said Kirkpatrick, will be paid out of the association's general fund, to which single members contribute $2.20 a month and married members pay $3.30, with family privileges.

"Of our members 932 are individuals who are entitled to medical service for themselves and 1,636 hold family memberships, also entitling the dependents of each member to services of the association's staff," Kirkpatrick said. "Some 6,173 persons are privileged to use the facilities of our organization.

"This expansion in the association's medical staff is only a part of a general program whereby we hope to increase the value of Group Health Association to its members."

Refusal of Washington hospitals to admit G. H. A. staff doctors to practice has handicapped the clinic severely and resulted in the decision to go ahead and build or equip an institution for the group's exclusive use.

New Pictures, Holdovers and Revivals Rule

Indoor and Outdoor Bills Offer Varied Amusement for Next Week.

Barbara Stanwyck and Herbert Marshall are the costars of the Twentieth Century-Fox production of "Always Goodbye," coming to the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater tomorrow for a week's engagement. In the supporting cast are such notable players as Binnie Barnes, Cesar Romero, Lynn Bari, Ian Hunter and Master John Russell, one of the most promising of the juvenile actors. The story concerns a young mother, forced to relinquish her baby son and the romantic developments that led to her recovery of him. The picture is handsomely staged and splendidly directed and photographed. On the stage next week, the Capitol will present Johnny Perkins as vaudeville headliner and master of ceremonies, surrounded by a clever group of specialists. The Fox Movietone News and Phil Lampkin's concert overture will complete the entertainment.

Musical romance with a Mexican setting will be provided on the screen of the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater for the week beginning tomorrow, when the major film offering will be Paramount's production of "Tropic Holiday," featuring Dorothy Lamour, Ray Milland, Bob Burns and Martha Raye. The story concerns a young motion picture script writer who crosses the border to "get away from it all," but, instead of that, gets deeper into it! Six new musical numbers by Augustin Lara, Mexico's popular song writer, are included in the development of the amusingly romantic play. The stage bill for the new week at the Earle will feature Borrah Minevitch and His Harmonica Rascals, Larry Blake, Marion Daniels, Maysy and Beach and the Sixteen Dancing Darlings.

"The Shopworn Angel," costarring Margaret Sullavan and James Stewart, with Walter Pidgeon leading the support, will be continued through a second week at Loew's Palace Theater, beginning tomorrow. This is the new version of the story of the Texas rookie who fell in love with a New York showgirl upon the entry of the United States into the World War. The excellent short subjects also will be held over.

Astrology is made the basis of an exciting mystery-drama for the first time in the Warner Brothers' production of "When Were You Born?" the new film release that brings Margaret Lindsay, Anna May Wong, Lola Lane and Anthony Averill to the screen at the Metropolitan Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. As an added attraction, Maxine, famous astro-numerologist, will give sittings in the lobby of the theater daily from 11 a. m. to 1 p. m., and from 2 to 4 p. m., offering free consultation to patrons.

"Having Wonderful Time" has so accurately expressed the reaction of the public to its many amusing qualities that the picture of that name, costarring Ginger Rogers and Douglas Fairbanks, jr., will be held over for a second week, beginning tomorrow, at RKO-Keith's. Important supporting roles are played in this subject by "Red" Skelton, Peggy Conklin, Lee Bowman, Lucille Ball, Donald Meek, Grady Sutton and scores more. The supplementary attractions also will be continued, including the "March of Time."

The foremost screen idol of the 1920s will return to the local screen for the week beginning tomorrow at Loew's Columbia Theater, when a revival of "The Sheik," starring Rudolph Valentino, will be presented as the chief feature of the bill. In this outstanding hit of its period, Valentino is supported by Agnes Ayres, Adolphe Menju, Lucian Littlefield and Walter Long. The feature will be augmented by short-reel subjects and a new issue of the News of the Day.

A startling short-screen feature, "That Mothers Might Live," suggested by a scientific discovery by Dr. Ignatz Philip Semmelweiss; "Going Places," an examination of the synthetic processes of making rubber; a beautiful color subject devoted to the Portugese fishermen out after tunas off the coast of the Galapagos Islands, and a cartoon comedy, "Window Shopping," will comprise the principal attractions at the Trans-Lux Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. The bill, as usual, will be based on complete newsreel coverage of the world.

The W. S. Gilbert farce, "Engaged," which has "caught On" well with the customers at the Roadside Theater this week, will be continued through a second week—as per custom—beginning next Monday out at the "old red barn" on the Rockville pike, beyond Bethesda. The principal roles are well played by Howard Wierum, Lansing Hall, Betty Brunstetter and Mimi Norton.

Lovers of the dance will have their innings at the National Sylvan Theater next Tuesday night, when the Marian Chace Dancers will provide the program of the Summer Festival. This will be the only dance program of the Sylvans al fresco season. A list of widely diversified choreographic creations is promised.

Toward becker and his orchestra now are completing their second successful week at Glen Echo Park's Spanish Garden ballroom and will be succeeded there next Monday night by Herbie Holmes and his instrumentalists, hailed as "Mississippi's Famous Musical Merchants." In the meantime, all of Glen Echo Park's 50-odd amusements continue in full midseason operation, with the Crystal Pool enjoying top ranking these hot days.

The S. S. Potomac of the Potomac River Line is crowded these evenings on its moonlight excursions when sweltering Washingtonians seek relief from the heat by steaming down the river and dancing to the strains of Jimmy Santmyer's music. Marion Swanson sings "golden-throated tunes" to add to the gayety. Sunday at 9 a. m. the boat will make another salt-water cruise to Colonial Beach.

The Wilson Line steamer City of Washington continues its regular daily and evening schedules of trips to Mount Vernon and moonlight cruises down the Potomac, with stops at Marshall Hall on the latter. This popular riverside amusement park boasts many new attractions this season, including a theater and speedboats for short trips on the river at a high rate of spraying speed.

BELL.

Within the past few days arrangements have been perfected between Mr. Cochran and Charles E. Tribby to establish a central, downtown ticket office in the Tribby establishment at 615 Fifteenth street northwest, where all seats will go on sale next Monday morning at 10 o'clock. This midcity ticket office—adjacent to RKO-Keith's Theater—will be open daily from 10 a. m. to 6 p. m. Immediately upon the daily closing of the Tribby ticket office at 6 p. m., all seats remaining unsold will be transferred to the Olney Theater, on the Georgia avenue pike between Olney and Ashton, where they will be available throughout the evening, beginning at 7 p. m.

It is announced that season reservations may be made, insuring the same seats for the given performance each week, with no advance payment, but with the stipulation that reservations must be called for one week before the performance for which they will be good.

Owing to the enforced assessment of both Federal and Maryland State amusement taxes—both of which are included in the cost of the tickets—the Olney Theater's price scale to many, no doubt, will look like a succession of odd-number misprints. However, these legal imposts will make the following admission charges mandatory at the Olney:

Night prices, $1.67 and $1.11 per seat; matinees, Thursdays and Saturdays, $1.11 and 84 cents per seat.

For the convenience of prospective patrons—and to save a litle telephone wear and tear on this column's ears—the downtown office phone number is NA. 8248 and the theater phone at Olney is Ashton 107.

Incidentally, and just to mix a little show talk in with the statistical tabulations, "The Lady Has a Heart," in which Miss Landi is to inaugurate the Olney, is Edward Roberts' adaptation of Ladislaus Bus-Fekete's Hungarian comedy, in which the leading male roles in support of the star will be played by Leslie Dennison, Gordon Richards and Howard Ferguson.

Elissa Landi, already well known in Washington from more or less frequent earlier visits here, is proving one of the most popular stars of the summer theater in the East. A recent engagement was played to capacity business and the most impressive box-office grosses of the hot-weather season, to date. While she was compiling this handsome record, the advance sale for her next engagement—at another playhouse not too far distant—crept up to the unprecedented figure of $5,000, a remarkable sum at any summer theater's popular scale of admission prices.

This Mr. Cochran, in passing, is a young fellow with ideas. Not to be outdone by the West Coast's veteran, Sid Grauman, and the cement footprints of celebrities in the lobby of his Chinese Theater in Hollywood, Impresario Cochran, who has built his Olney Theater with ancient oak trees sprouting up through it, plans to chisel a long plaque in the side of the venerable oak that penetrates the lobby of his playhouse—and from a little acorn grew—whereon each visiting star will be requested to sign her name, or his. Each signature then will be burned into the sturdy side of the tree with an electric needle, or an acetylene blow-torch, or something, for permanent preservation. Miss Landi will inaugurate this chirographic custom, along with the Olney's first season, on Monday evening, July 25. It is planned to hedge the arborial ceremony about with a bit of what is vulgarly referred to as box-office ballyhoo.

• • • •

Reverting briefly to the seemingly perplexing matter of seat sales for the Capital's "barn" theaters, this appears to be an excellent time to remind the public that seats for the Roadside Theater, out the Rockville pike beyond Bethesda, are obtainable at Mrs. Dorsey's Concert Bureau, in Droop's, Thirteenth and G streets, during the daytime, and at the theater box-office at night. These seats are reserved.

The Cross Roads Theater, at Baileys Cross Roads, Va., does not operate on a reserved-seat basis and so sells its tickets at the door—as long as they last.

A little more about this youngster, Johnny Russell, who does such an appealing bit of work with Barbara Stanwyck and Herbert Marshall in "Always Goodbye," coming to the Capitol tomorrow. Johnny is 5 years old and is the son of Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Countryman. He was born in Brooklyn, N. Y. His father is art director of a world-wide newspaper syndicate, with headquarters in New York. Master Johnny won the role of Roddy in "Always Goodbye" against odds of 489 to 1, which usually is referred to as nice going at any age. Lew Schreiber, Twentieth Century-Fox casting director, and Sidney Lanfield, who directed the picture, searched for almost a month to find the right little shaver for this particular assignment. During that time, they tested 489 boys between the ages of 4 and 7. Then little Johnny came along. Had he got there first, it is highly probable that the other 489 would have been turned back at the studio gate.

Walter Cersley, manager of the Warner Brothers' Uptown Theater, one of the newer and handsomer recent additions to the Warner Circuit in Washington, was elected president of the Cleveland Park Business Men's Association at its last meeting. This comes as a deserved honor to one of the veteran managers on the "wheel."

Mr. Cersley formed his present affiliation back in the days when the residential houses under Warner control were being operated by their founder, the late Harry M. Crandall. He has served as manager of several of the outlying theaters on the circuit and was assigned to the Uptown upon its completion in recognition of long and efficient service.

Maxine, astro-numerologist, who will preside over the lobby of the Metropolitan Theater during the engagement of "When Were You Born?" for the week beginning tomorrow, is expected to arrive in town sometime around midday today. In recognition of her unusual scientific achievements—astro-numerology, I am led to believe, is a science and not a clairvoyant endowment—the Warner Brothers executives plan to fete her this afternoon in the Warner club rooms in the Earle Theater Building. This would be at the ugly hour of about 2:30 or 3 p. m. on the busiest day of the week, but the ladies and gentlemen (sic) of the drama desks are invited to be present, nevertheless. I don't know whether it would be safe to subject our numerology to Maxine or not, but, at least, she might give us a good number to play the next day!

SUNDAY EVENING at 6 o'clock one of the guests at the St. Regis Hotel walked through the foyer, and then stopped to talk to Mr. McGowan, the manager . . . "Checking out, sir?" McGowan asked . . . "Oh, no," the guest replied. "Keep that suite for me. I've got my clothes up there. I'll be back in only a few days" . . . By "a few days" the guest was referring to the length of time he'd need to fly around the world . . . His name still is on the hotel register—"Howard Hughes."

PRINCE BERTIL, grandson of the King of Sweden, was the guest of honor at the reception tendered by the Beverly Bogerts at Newport last Friday . . . Bertil entered the reception hall limping somewhat and leaning on a cane for support . . . The debutantes assembled were extremely disappointed, for they had hoped to dance with the prince and hadn't been told of his unfortunate "accident" . . . After the first hour, the prince discarded his cane and danced with Leslie Bogert . . . No accident had befallen him. Bertil had been told that he'd have to dance with every debutante present—and so he had resorted to the limp-and-cane routine as a way out.

• • • •

MOST OF THE EVENING Bertil sat next to the bandstand, where Meyer Davis conducted the orchestra. A microphone was placed in front of him, and the prince sang "Rosalie," in Swedish, whistled Cole Porter tunes, and, by drumming with his fingers on the table, accompanied the orchestra in "Tiger Rag" . . . "Your Highness," Meyer Davis told him, "if you ever give up being a prince, let me know. You can join our band" . . . Bertil offered his card, requested Davis' card in return, and explained, "In these days, a prince never knows."

In Hollywood

With HEDDA HOPPER

Hollywood, Calif., July 13.—Carole Lombard, our spontaneous combustion comedienne, took over the press department at the Selznick Studio and put on a swell show. Sirens shrieked and guns barked. Carole, dressed in a black tailored suit and wearing orchids, sat beside a bowl of American beauties and was in her usual form—tops. She talked to Gov. Miriam, made a luncheon date with Mayor Shaw and adroitly handled a nosey writer who wanted to read the letters of protest on the casting of "Gone With the Wind." She even tried to locate Mahatma Gandi and the Emperor of Ethiopia for their opinions.

HEDDA HOPPER

Carole also told about going into the dress business. You will soon be able to buy Carole Lombard over the counter. If all the dresses come in her own size, most women will have to diet before they can squeeze into 'em. Another of Carole's sidelines is a 70-acre lemon grove.

Carole said her most frightening experience was being thrown from a horse while out riding with Buddy Rogers and then having the horse roll over on her.

Her nicest experience was an interview with John Barrymore when they played together in "Twentieth Century."

She still lives modestly in a rented house, on the front door of which hangs the brass knocker which belonged to the late H. D. Lombard, whose name she took. Mrs. Lombard gave her the knocker after her husband's death.

On leaving the studio, I discovered a street had been named Scarlett Way. Sign has been there six months and no one noticed it.

For a moment I thought I was at Vassar or Bryn Mawr when I beheld the daisy chain down the center of the table at Mme. Jeritza's. Then I discovered I was in the midst of a cosmopolitan gathering that liked good food. Invited for tea, most of those who came—and about 200 did—ate their dinner. After sampling the smorgasbord, I counted 19 different kinds of pastry! You could have put most of them in a Cartier setting and worn them as clips. And that black German coffee with whipped cream—oh, boy, that's living.

Jeritza is a marvelous hostess. She can even introduce you to an ambassador while telling a funny story.

I was delighted to see Carrie Jacobs Bond again and Mrs. Dick Schweppe, who is about to leave with Dick for Bad Nunhelm. Lost another friend a few days ago when Mrs. Randolph Huntington Miner hopped off to Europe at a moment's notice—to be gone a couple of years. Bet she will be back in six months. The Will Hayses were also at the tea. Mrs. Hays just returned from Hawaii with Mrs. O. O. McIntyre, who has been very much touched by the hundreds of letters she received from total strangers after Odd's passing.

"The Drunkard" just celebrated its fifth year here. The longest run on record. Our skyscrapers, marriages and careers rarely last as long.

Cute little S. Simon has a busy day at the races. She went out to the track with the Earl of Warwick, did her betting with Joe Schenck and rode home in the rumble seat of Stanley Kahn's mile-long Dusenberg with Stanley's two boys.

The film "Shopworn Angel" holds your interest even after you have left the theater. Jimmy Stewart's and Margaret Sullavan's performances are so poignant you want to cry with them. Walter Pidgeon ran a close third. Golly, I'd like to see Margaret play "Scarlett." She and Jimmy have an emotional depth difficult to match. And a word about Hattie McDaniels, who is always good, bless her.

Gable Interviews Self as Questioner Goes Speechless

She was Jane Withers.

Upon being introduced to Gable on Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Too Hot to Handle" set, the youngster suddenly found herself speechless. A wide smile came over her face and her lips trembled—but try as she would—Jane just couldn't talk.

By the time the interview was complete, however, Jane managed to ask just one question, which was immediately granted: "May I have your autograph?"

Decathlon Champ Plays Football Role

Glenn Morris, Olympic decathlon champion, who not long ago played in the line-up of the East-West Shriners' annual football classic in San Francisco, this week for the first time played football for the screen.

* WASHINGTON: THURSDAY, JULY 14, 1938 19

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

It was the misfortune of the Pittsburgh Pirates to come to the notice of this department yesterday. At the time they were doing very well, amassing a 13-game winning streak and taking over the league lead. Then Povich made note of the fact, commented on the newfound power of the Pirates, hinted that Pittsburgh could win the pennant, and what happened?

POVICH.

The Pirates a few hours later got themselves bumped off by the lowly Brooklyn Dodgers, lost their 13-game Winning streak, and held their league lead only because the Giants were taking a simultaneous licking from the Reds.

In the words of Confucius, 'twas ever thus. One word of praise from this department and the object thereof is doomed. It's the Povich curse. A few years ago when Heinie Manush had hit safety in 40-odd consecutive games and threatened the all-time big league record, we labeled him as the greatest hitter of his time. That same afternoon he went hitless!

• • • •

Last week were typed out column after column relating the overwhelming superiority of the American League over the National League All-Stars, and what happened? The American League was licked, 4 to 1, for the second time in six years! If we remember rightly, we picked Richmond to leave Grant's forces broken and scattered, and Custer to beat Sitting Bull to a frazzle.

• • • •

There was the time, too, three years ago, when we suddenly discovered that Pete Appleton was the most effective pitcher on the Washington staff, and literally beseeched Manager Bucky Harris to give him a chance to pitch. Harris did—that afternoon. Appleton was knocked out of the box in the first inning.

• • • •

Yesterday afternoon, as Taft Wright came to the bat as a pinch-hitter with two out in the ninth, we dropped the remark to our press box neighbor that Wright couldn't make a hit off Feller if he were up their swinging a settee. Whereupon Wright immediately doubled and drove home the tying two runs.

It is with trembling fingers that we note that the Nats are currently enjoying the comforts of a six-game winning streak. Manager Bucky Harris has done nothing to deserve being visited by the Povich curse, so we now attempt to make it work in reserve. Thus:

It is our deep-rooted belief that the Nats have been playing far over their heads thus far this season and will be lucky to win another game this year. Cleveland undoubtedly will put an end to the Nats' winning streak this afternoon, with Dutch Leonard getting knocked out of the box pronto.

• • • •

George Case and Jimmy Wasdell, the sensational rookies, appear to this department to be flashes in the pan. Both will be lucky to be in the big leagues by the end of the month. Buddy Lewis' batting weakness has been discovered and he will be a terrific drawback to the Nats, as will Cecil Travis. Al Simmons and Buddy Myer for too many reasons to mention.

• • • •

The Washington pitching staff is a cheap lot that belongs in the minor leagues. Harry Kelley can't continue to get away with lucky victories and Dutch Leonard's knuckle ball doesn't figure to hold up in another trip around the circuit. Wesley Ferrell is definitely through and Pete Appleton is trading material. Chase and Krakauskas are a pair that sound like cheese and crackers and are every bit as effective on the pitching mound.

I guess that ought to get some gratifying results for Harris!

Arch McDonald's doubts that all things happen in cycles of three have now completely vanished. He is a firm believer in that theory because:

Three Tuesdays ago, he suffered a broken leg in an automobile mishap.

Two Tuesdays ago, the ambulance bearing him home from the hospital figured in a head-on collision and McDonald was forced to return to the hospital.

Last Tuesday passed uneventfully—he thought. And then, yesterday, he discovered that it had not been completely uneventful. For a sneak thief had invaded the McDonald household and stolen a valuable diamond ring which he had presented to Mrs. McDonald on the occasion of their fifteenth anniversary a week ago!

Burleigh Jacobs,18, Sets Record 67 to Win Western Medal

South Bend, Ind., July 13 (AP). A smiling youth from Milwaukee, Wis., 18 years old and just graduated from high school, smashed the Chain O'Lakes course record today by scoring a 34-33—67, four under par, to win medalist honors in the thirty-eighth annual Western Amateur golf championship tournament. Yesterday he shot 72, giving him a 36-hole total of 139.

Match play will start tomorrow with the 63 low scorers and Wilford Wehrie, Racine, Wis., the defending champion, engaging in the first 18 hole round.

Jacobs' new record blotted out the previous low 68 established by Willie Goggin, San Francisco, made in the Western Open in 1935.

The Takoma Tigers will play the Takoma Athletic Club nine a double-header Sunday on the latter's diamond. The first game is scheduled to get under way at 1 p. m.

Brothers Under the Mud!

Jimmy Hines Halts Denny Shute's 3d P. G. A. Title Bid

Defeats Pro King, 2 and 1; Nelson Wins

Swamps Harry Bassler by 11 and 10 Score; Pair Meet Today.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.
A Staff Correspondent.

Shawnee-on-Delaware, Pa., July 13.—There will be no third term for Densmore Shute.

For today, over the island course of the Shawnee Country Club, the two-time national P. G. A. champion met a better man in this match play championship for the first time since 1935, blond-haired, red-faced Jimmy Hines.

On the thirty-fifth green, by a 2 and 1 margin, Hines stopped Shute's P. G. A. streak of 14 straight matches with a subpar exhibition. The Great Neck, Long Island, pro, twelfth among the season's money winners, thus qualified as Byron Nelson's opponent in tomorrow's quarter-finals.

Nelson missed a tournament record by a single hole as he swamped Harry Bassler, Long Beach, Calif., 11 and 10, and was 8 under par as the match end[ed] on the twenty-sixth hole. Nelson had a morning 64, with nine birdies, as he compiled a 12-up margin at the turn.

Two extra-hole matches tacked a fitting finish to a thrill-studded day, as dapper Paul Runyan ousted lanky Ray Mangrum on the thirty-seventh, when the latter missed an 18-inch putt, and Gene Sarazen, three-time former champion, accounted for Jimmy Demaret, of Houston, Tex., on the thirty-eighth hole, although he was 6 over par for the day, the worst golf of the eight matches.

With the exception of Shute it was a day for the form players. Sammy Sneed won his third consecutive match by a 4 and 3 margin over the local favorite, Scranton's Felix Serafin.

Smith's Birdies Brilliant.

Jim Foulis, of Chicago, son and nephew of great golfers, plodded along head down and silent, and trounced Marvin Stahl, of Lansing, Mich., 4 and 3, while Horton Smith threw a birdie barrage at Bill Burke on the last nine to win 3 and 2 after watching his morning round lead vanish.

Henry Picard, among the low qualifiers and double victor yesterday with little difficulty, was one under par as he outsted Dick Metz, Ralph Guldahl's conqueror, by 4 and 3 margin. Pickard has been somewhat overlooked, but tonight he is the most logical of the eight remaining players to succeed Denny Shute.

There was a bit of drama on the thirty-fifth green where Shute's hopes were buried after two years and two matches of triumph. It was an even match throughout the day. They were all square at the ninth with par rounds and even at the halfway mark, 1 under.

All Square at Twenty-ninth.

On the outgoing nine of the afternoon round, Hines picked up two holes, but Shute again squared the issue on the twenty-ninth, as his conqueror was in two traps and picked up. A stymie on the thirtieth cost Shute the hole and he went 1 down, and they halved through the thirty-fifth from this point.

On the semifinal hole, Hines, hitting first, pushed his tee shot to the right and Denny failed to take advantage of it, hooking in the deep rough as he attempted a short cut around the corner on the par 5 number. Shute was finally on in 4 and Hines, after trapping his second, reached the carpet in the same number.

Shute was some 8 feet away, and needed the putt for a halve to stay in the match. He stroked carefully and the gallery, largest of the tournament, roared as the ball apparently went into the cup. But somehow the ball hung on the lip. The two stood waiting for the ball to

Bucs Lose to Dodgers But Keep First Place

Flatbush Outfit Wins, 10-5, to End Pirates' 13-Game Winning Streak—But Giants Lose and Corsairs Stay on Top.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, July 13.—The Brooklyn Dodgers and the "13 jinx" caught up with the Pirates in the ninth inning today (note the date) and the Bucs' 13-game winning streak, longest in the majors this season, came to an end.

The Dodgers exploded a seven-run barrage in the final frame to whip the Pirates, 10 to 5, and snap the run. Despite the setback, however, the Bucs retained their slim percentage on first place in the National League, since the second-place Giants also were defeated.

Blanked for six innings by young Russ Bauers, the Dodgers started to roll with a run in the seventh, tied the game at 3 to 3 in the eighth on Dolph Camilli's two-run homer, and then sewed up the decision at the expense of big Mace Brown.

Brown, No. 1 relief pitcher in the majors this season, was charged with the loss, which snapped his personal wining streak at seven straight games. It was his third defeat against 12 victories for the season. Tot Pressnell, third Dodger pitcher to see action, was the winner.

The Dodgers didn't start to click until Tuck Stainback, who has been knocking around from the Cubs to the Cardinals, the Phillies, and, finally, Brooklyn, this season, entered the game in the seventh. He singled in the eighth and scored on Camilli's round-tripper, and then sparked the winning splurge in the ninth with a double with the bases loaded.

Through the first five frames, the game was a scoreless duel between Bauers and Southpaw Vito Tamulis. In the sixth, however, the Pirates counted three times on four hits and appeared to have the game on ice.

Young and Handley 2 Reasons for Bucs' Rise

By Alan Gould.

New York July 13.—Aside from more obvious reasons for current splurge of those bold bucs of Pittsburgh, including better all-around pitching, steadier defense and keener team spirit, there are several less conspicuous but nonetheless potent factors . . . two of them are Pep Young and Lee Handley, hustling young infielders who have not only done fine solo work but put new life and steadiness into operations of Arky Vaughan.

Hitherto known chiefly for his slugging, Vaughan is having best defensive season of his career . . . Backstopping of big Al Todd is another big reason for Pirate success. . . The famous Waner brothers still are useful but no longer the pace-setters . . . DiMaggio's Home Runs Put Yanks Back on Top

Joe Smacks Out 2 Circuit Blows and Yanks Move Into First Place as Indians Bow to Nats; 'Grandma' Johnny Murphy Gets Credit for Game.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 13.—Joe DiMaggio's big bat knocked the Yankees into first place in the American League today.

Jolting Joe hit two homers, his second coming with one out and two mates aboard in the tenth inning, to give the Yanks a 15-to-12 decision over the St. Louis Browns in a free-slugging battle.

Since the Cleveland Indians were beaten in Washington, the victory boosted the Yanks into first place by half a game.

DiMaggio's second homer, his sixteenth of the season, climaxed a long uphill fight for the Yanks. Lou Gehrig also belted a four-bagger for the world champions, and Beau Bell whacked one for the Brownies.

Travis Hurt, Out 2 Days

Leonard to Face Tribe Here Today.

The Nats won a ball game yesterday, but lost the services of Cecil Travis for "at least two days."

Travis was spiked in the right knee in a collision with Roy Weatherly when he took a throw from Catcher Rick Ferrell on an attempted steal in the third inning.

A small but deep gash forced Travis out of the game and he was taken to Georgetown University Hospital, where he spent last night. Trainer Mike Martin reported the injury was not serious and expressed the opinion that Travis would return to the line-up by Sunday, if not sooner.

Dutch Leonard and his knuckle ball will be sent to the mound by Manager Bucky Harris today in an attempt to run the Nats' winning streak to seven straight and sweep the three-game series from the Cleveland Indians.

Manager Oscar Vitt, desperate for a victory to halt the skid of the Cleveland Club, is expected to give the pitching job to Johnny Allen, the league's leading hurler.

The Cleveland Club was dealt a blow yesterday before the game when Pitcher Johnny Humphries was struck by a line drive off the bat of Julius Solters in batting practice.

Humphries was hit on the elbow of his pitching arm and was rushed to Georgetown Hospital for an X-ray examination which revealed no fracture, but a bad bruise is expected to keep the sensational young pitcher out of action for a week.

Moaned one Cleveland player:

"Solters hasn't been any help to the club all season and now he hurts Humphries with a batting practice hit. It was the only line drive Solters has hit this season."

3-Run Rally In 9th Kicks Indians Out

Griff Hurler Allows But 4 Hits; Taft Wright Starts Fireworks.

By Shirley Povich.

Washington's surprising Nats, threatened with the loss of their winning streak, stirred up three runs after two were out in the ninth inning, won a 4-3 ball game and knocked the Indians out of the league lead yesterday.

It was a sensational finish by the Nats against Cleveland's Bob Feller, who was enjoying the comforts of a 3-to-1 lead as the game wore into the last half of the ninth. He had allowed only six hits, had not walked a batter since the second inning and had struck out seven.

Wright Saves the Day.

But the 10,000 customers evinced new interest when Feller walked Buddy Myer at the start of the ninth. Jimmy Wasdell created 10,000 moans with a foul pop to Keltner, but Ossie Bluege produced a two-bagger to leftfield that put the tying runs in scoring position.

Rick Ferrell, author of two of the six hits Feller had allowed in the first eight innings, represented the next Washington hope, but Feller struck him out and gloom hung thickly over the premises.

Then along came Taft Wright, Bucky Harris' No. 1 pinch-hitter. One strike, two strikes Feller slipped past Wright and then the chunky pinch-hitter slashed a two-bagger down the leftfield line, Myer and Bluege scored and it was a tie ball game.

Manager Oscar Vitt looked appraisingly at his relief pitchers and then decided to leave Feller in the box. Feller then passed George Case, and Buddy Lewis broke up the ball game with a single to center that scored Wright.

That hit by Lewis had its reverberations in New York where the Yankees moved into the lead by virtue of their triumph over the Browns.

Kelley Stars on Mound

Another reason Washington won its sixth straight ball game yesterday was hefty Harry Kelley. The venerable right hander, who is the newest sensation of Bucky Harris' staff, outpitched Feller with an impressive four-hit performance.

In only two innings did Kelley permit the Indians any hits—the fourth inning when they reached him for two singles to take a brief 1-0 lead, and the ninth inning when a double, a single and two walks netted two Cleveland runs which threatened to decide the ball game.

The Indians didn't get their first hit off Kelley until one was out in the fourth. It was a bunt by the speedy Weatherly and it led to the first run of the ball game. Weatherly stole second and scored on Hale's single into rightfield.

Wasdell Steals Base.

The Nats used much the same tactics to tie the game at 1-1 in the same inning. Wasdell singled to left, stole second and was driven across the plate by Rick Ferrell's single to left.

From that point the game rocked along at 1-1 until the ninth, with both the rookie Feller and the veteran Kelley pitching superb ball. The Nats were making scattered hits against Feller, but Kelley was holding the Indians hitless during a four-inning stretch until the ninth.

Then the veteran lapsed to the extent of walking Odell Hale. He found himself knee-deep in trouble when Jeff Heath bounced a freakish double over Wasdell's head which moved Hale to third. Averill was purposely passed, but Trosky produced a long fly to West that brought Hale home. Keltner lifted the Indians into a 3-1 lead with a single to left that scored Heath.

Then the Nats went to bat and won their sixth straight ball game.

Miss Goodsill to Play Miss Shuster for Title

Chicago, July 13 (AP).—Jane Goodsill, 16-year-old star from St. Paul Minn., and Catherine Shuster, of Long Beach, Calif., will match shots at the Midlothian Country Club tomorrow for the Women's Western Junior golf championship.

Miss Goodsill advanced to the finals today with a 3 and 2 victory over Mary Wilder, of Chicago. Miss Shuster defeated Kathleen Carey, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, 2 and 1.

Diary of a Yankee Fan.

April 15.—Well, in a few days the baseball season will be on again and those Yankees will be romping away with another pennant. They've got everything, those Yanks. Pitching, power, pep. Sometimes I kind of wish they weren't so good. They take all the excitement out of the American League race. You just know from the beginning that they're going to win. Look what they did last year—a runaway. And look what they did to the Giants in the world's series—a slaughter.

VIDMER.

And it's the same old team right down the line. Except Tony Lazzeri will be missing this season. But they say this kid, Flash Gordon, is the greatest second baseman that ever came out of the minor leagues. Of course Joe DiMaggio hasn't signed yet, but he'll be along in a few days all right. And even if he doesn't sign—even if he holds out all season it won't make any difference. The Yankees are strong enough to win without Joe. What a pitching staff. What power.

* * * *

May 1—The Yankees are all right, nothing to worry about, they just got off to a bad start that's all. Gehrig's not hitting, Gomez has had a little tough luck in the box, and DiMaggio is just about ready. Wait until that old power starts knocking down the fences. It won't be long now. What if they're not out in front. The season's young. There's a long way to go. They'll get there in a hurry and win by 20 games—As soon as Gehrig and DiMaggio get going, and Gomez hits a winning stride.

* * * *

May 15—The Yankees aren't up up there yet but it makes the race interesting because they're not. But, of course, it's just a lot of false excitement, everybody knows that the Yankees are going to win in a walk once they get started.

Look, they haven't been playing anywhere near the kind of ball everybody knows they can play. Gehrig is still in a slump—way under .300 and DiMaggio hasn't really hit his stride. He ought to be batting 50 points higher than he is. And the pitching staff hasn't rounded into shape yet. Wait until they start really clicking. It'll be a parade.

June 1—What of it? Suppose the Indians are leading the league? This is only the first of June what's that got to do with the end of September? But it won't take that long for the Yankees to get on top. How can you keep a club like that down for long? Look at the power they've got. Look at the pitching. It's all there, if they just turn it on.

The Indians don't mean anything. They've just been lucky to stay up as long as they have. No competition, and the Red Sox have been carried along by two Foxx. Those guys can't keep up old men—Lefty Grove and Jimmie the pace they've been setting. Oh, they were good enough when they were with the Athletics, but that was years ago. They never have been the same since they were sold to Boston. The Yankees are the only team in the league. Wait and see. It won't be long now.

June 15—Of course the Yankees haven't come along as fast as I figured they would, but there's no sense in worrying about them. Why even going the way they have been they're still only a few games behind the leaders and everybody knows that they aren't playing the ball they're capable of playing. Yet even with the pitching staff stumbling and the hitters way below their real strength they've hung on the heels of the Indians and the Red Sox.

Now here's the way I figure it. If they can keep within a few games of the leaders playing the way they have been playing, where will they be when they really hit their stride? Why, the answer's simple—they'll just run away from those other clubs. Of course that kid Gordon didn't pan out as well as everyone thought he would, but Knickerbocker's all right out there at second base. Maybe we should have kept Tony another year though at that. And it doesn't look as though Gomez is ever going to hit his stride this year. And Lou Gehrig still hasn't shaken off that slump, not completely. Still, I'm not worried about it. Not yet. The Yankees are too good to stay down forever.

* * * *

July 1—See? What did I tell you? Look at the way those Yankees are coming now. They're in a winning streak and on their 118 Golfers Participate in State Title Event at Manor Club.

Intermittent showers which cooled off the landscape only made 118 golfers "hotter" in their pursuit of the Maryland State Mixed Amateur Two-Ball honors over the Manor Club course, at Norbeck, Md., yesterday.

Ripping off rounds of 38 and 40, Miss Bernice Baker and E. B. Wagner, Indian Spring, annexed titular honors with 78-15, 63. The winners played consistently throughout the 18 holes, registering 9 pars and never taking more than one over par on the other nine. The new champions started their quest auspiciously with four pars in a row and on the back leg they parred the eleventh, twelfth and thirteenth.

The Rolling Road, Baltimore, entries, Mrs. C. C. Heidelbach and O. B. Coblentz, jr., and Mrs. Harry Stansbury and Perry Simmons, tied with Mr. and Mrs. Lacey, of Manor Club, for second place with 64s. The Capital suburbanites were steady throughout, with rounds of 42 and 39, parring the eighth, ninth, tenth, eleventh and twelfth holes, successively, and also the fifteenth and seventeenth. The Manorites enjoyed a 17-stroke handicap.

Heavy premiums aided heavily in the Baltimoreans finish. Stansbury and Simmons went out in 48 and were back in 44, and counted in a 28 stroke "spot," while Heidelbach and Coblentz, shoved the pellet about for rounds of 47 and 44 and lopped off 27 swings for an envious 64.

Baltimoreans also horned in on fifth honors, the prizes being split between Mrs. O. B. Coblentz, jr., and George Heidelbach, of Rolling Road, and Mrs. C. W. Smith, Hillendale, and Reid Scott, of Baltimore, C. C. Each pair turned in low net cards of 65.

O'Mahoney and Dusek Grapple Here Tonight

Danno O'Mahoney, the Irish whip specialist, will oppose the "terror" of the Dusek "Riot Squad"—Ernie Dusek—tonight at Griffith Stadium in the headline wrestling match.

Undefeated in all of his local engagements, and beaten only a few times in his career, Danno will seek his second straight victory in as many bouts over a Dusek. It was two weeks ago that Danno, making his 1938 bow at the stadium, won from Joe Dusek.

No longer is Danno timid. He once was one of those clean-cut, straight-forward grapplers, who took plenty of punishment. Today he is changed, he says. He shakes his foes with forearm jolts to their chins and with that Irish whip—always the climax of a match.

DANNO O'MAHONEY.

A victory over Ernie Dusek will mean a shot at Steve (Crusher) Casey, the Bowser circuit champion. But trying to beat Ernie is no easy task. Ernie has never been whipped in Washington.

O'Mahoney whipped Londos in Boston to win the world title. He dropped it to Yvon Robert, the French Canadian, who in turn was dethroned in Washington by Cliff Olson.

Olson also is appearing on tonight's card. The Minnesota Swede, angling for a shot at O'Mahoney or Dusek, will meet Ed Kippons, from Tulsa.

The Olson-Kippens clash will be the semiwindup. Kippons was a member of the Oklahoma Aggies college team and won honors in Olympic and amateur competition.

Indications are that the winner of the semiwindup bout will meet the O'Mahoney-Dusek winner.

First bout is at 8:30.

Bees Defeat Cards, 10-5

3 Homers by Mize Fail to Overcome Early Lead.

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, July 13.—It wasn't Johnny Mize's fault the Cardinals dropped their seventh straight game today as the Boston Bees won a series opener, 10 to 5.

Big Johnny, whose failure at the plate has been one of the major disappointments in these parts, crashed out three successive homers to drive in all the Red Bird runs as a tuberculosis day crowd of 7,846 cheered madly.

Reds Rout Giants, 6-1, In Game Cut by Rain

Paul Derringer Holds New York to 8 Hits and Drives in 2 Runs in Big 5-Tally 6th Inning Barrage.

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, July 13.—Behind Paul Derringer's effective eight-hit pitching, the Reds routed the New York Giants, 6 to 1, today in the first game of the National League champions' Western invasion. The game was cut to eight innings because of rain.

The defeat left the New Yorkers in second place, two percentage points back of Pittsburgh.

Derringer not only handled the pitching chores, but drove in two of the Reds' runs during their big five-run sixth inning. They pounded out six hits off Clyde Castleman during this frame to put the game on ice. Ernie Lombardi's double accounted for one of the runs and Ival Goodman's single for two more.

Mrs. Hopkins Wins Muncaster Trophy.

The last shall be first in two-day golf tournaments.

If you don't believe it, listen to what happened on the Washington Golf and Country Club as thirty-two women battled for the right to take the Dr. Stewart B. Muncaster Cup home.

Mrs. S. C. Hopkins who wasn't anywhere at the end of the first 18 holes in Flight A Tuesday, finishing with 105 strokes, snapped around the course in 96 yesterday and with a 40 stroke gratuity, gave her a score of 161, and the right to put the Muncaster receptacle on her mantlepiece. And before the final fireworks started yesterday, Mrs. Edward Hotze with a 91, looked a cinch winner.

Second place in Flight A went to Mrs. H. B. Master, with 162, the draw giving her the edge over two rivals, Mrs. W. F. Draper and E. L. Duffies, who also had 162s. Low gross honors were garnered by Mrs. D. C. Roney with 100—94—194.

The Flight B winner was Mrs. Gorham F. Freer, with 109—98—207—52—155. Mrs. O. M. Reed, Mrs. R. B. Patteson finished in that order in a draw after each had posted net 160s. Mrs. Lafayette Franklin, made 161. Consolation honors went to Mrs. William Ballinger.

A miniature flag tournament at Beaver Dam saw Mrs. William Kerr triumphing, covering nine holes with one stroke to spare, while Mrs. C. E. McGowan and Miss Elsie Stavely deadlocked for second when each completed her stroke assignments by dropping the ball into the ninth cup. Miss Albert Hass had exhausted her quota on the ninth green for fourth place.

Bosox Split With Tigers

Take First Game, 7-4, But Drop Finale, 9-5.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, July 13.—The Red Sox split a double-header with Detroit today, winning the first game, 7-4, and dropping the second contest, 9-5, while opening a long home stand against the Western clubs.

Although he has yet to last the full distance, Right-hander Emerson Dickman, was credited with his third victory while giving the Tigers 13 hits in the opener. With two on and one out in the ninth, Dickman was replaced by Lefty Archie McKain, who ended the game by forcing Chet Morgan to hit into a double play.

Mark Christman, who replaced the ailing Billy Rogell in the second game, led the Tigers' attack with four hits, including a double. Morgan came within one putout of the league record when he accepted ten chances in centerfield.

(Each day, Arch McDonald distributes 10 points among the Nats whose play was most helpful to the Washington Club. At the end of each month The Washington Post will award to the leading player a gift in token of the honor of being The Post-Wheaties "Man of the Month."

Harry Kelley moved among the leaders in the Man of the Month contest by virtue of his impressive pitching in yesterday's triumph over the Cleveland Indians.

To Kelley, five points, because he held the Indians to four hits in winning his ball game, outpitching Bob Feller.

To Taft Wright, two points, because his two-bagger in a pinch-hitting role in the ninth scored the two tying runs and made the Nats' victory possible.

2 Major Upsets Mark Public Parks Tennis Tourney at Rock Creek

Two Upsets Mark Public Parks Play

Miss Charlotte Decker Defeats Top-Seeded Net Player.

Two major upsets marked the abbreviated play in yesterday's public parks tennis tournament at the Rock Creek courts. In the women's singles match, Miss Charlotte Decker, seeded No. 3, upset the top-ranking woman player, Mrs. Dorette Miller, 6—4, 8—6, 6—4. Mrs. Miller played a beautiful game throughout, but she could not cope with Miss Decker's clever back-court shots. Mrs. Miller was given the No. 1 spot in the seedings when Sara Moore, defending champion, found herself unable to compete in the tournament this year.

Miss Decker, jubilant at having gained the final round of the parks tourney, will play in the finals Friday against the winner of the Willie O'Steen-Edith McCulloch match. This match, originally scheduled yesterday, was postponed because of rain.

The other upset of the day was accomplished by Art Simmons, who repulsed the efforts of Pat Deck, fifth-seeded netman in the men's singles division. Simmons presented an invulnerable defense, which proved too much for Deck, who had compiled an enviable record in preliminary round matches. In the other singles match of the day, Ray Stocklinski, third-seeded, defeated Ray Sherfy, 6—2, 7—5.

Most of the matches were halted because of the rain, and the majority of these will be played tomorrow.

The Murray Construction Co. beat the Savoy A. C. yesterday, 16-12, to move into second place in the Fourteenth Street Businessmen's Soft Ball League. Woodcock and Houston led the attack for the winners. Fenwick played a sterling game afield for the Savoy Club.

Kavakos Grill Wins.

Reversing their order of play, the New Deal Softballers, who sensationally copped the first half of the Sherwood Playground League by winning 10 out of 12 games, yesterday dropped their fifth consecutive contest to Kavakos Grill, 5 to 0. New Deal has yet to win its first game in the second half.

Pete Scalzo, sixth-ranking featherweight, who faces Tony Dupre next Monday night at Griffith Stadium in the second chapter of Goldie Ahearn's Feather Parade, has lost only one bout in his professional career, that defeat being administered by Mike Belloise, who dropped a decision to Joes Archibald last Monday . . . Joe Keegin, Georgetown University catcher, is batting the ball at a fancy clip for Staunton in the Virginia League . . . Edith McCulloch and Hazel Bishopp, quarter-final opponents in the Public Parks tennis tourney, are the closest of friends off the court . . . Joe Greenberg, Baltimore third baseman, is a brother of Detroit's Hank . . . Georgie Abrams and his manager, Syd Fishell, are at Grand Canyon, Ariz., en route to the Pacific Coast, where George is slated to meet Young Corbett . . . Jimmy Foxx, Boston first sacker, has become a distinct threat to eclipse Hack Wilson's mark of 215 runs batted in . . . Washington appears to be Mike Belloise's hard luck town. Only twice has he fought here, twice has he entered the ring as the favorite, and twice he has been beaten.

Baseball writers are singing the praises of Johnny Humphries, Cleveland pitcher, who, they say, is faster than Bob Feller . . . Johnny Fanning, Central High basketball and track star, will enter Catholic University next fall . . . First in line for a physical education teaching job is Phil Fox, who was a three-letter man at Wilson Teachers College . . . His brother, Sam, chief at Henry-Polk Playground, will enroll at Ohio State in the fall . . . Gil Hunt is surprising all tennis followers by his showing in the Maryland State matches at Baltimore . . . Buck Newsom, "eccentric" St. Louis Browns' hurler, is the top traveler of baseball, having changed uniforms 23 times in 11 years. Despite this fact, several major league teams are dickering for his services.

Sandlot Pick-ups

The National Savings nine, of the Industrial League, which at present occupy second place in the second half loop standings, have acquired two ace players, and the result may mean a last half pennant for the Bankers . . . Dick Ayres, former University of Virginia hurler, and Second Baseman Johnny Braddock, who captained the Notre Dame diamonders last year, have seen fit to cast their talent with the Savings squad.

• • • •

Since the second half American Legion Junior Baseball League has been underway, Costello Post, last year's champs and present league leaders, have played a total of 36 innings collecting 43 runs and 69 hits . . . After being forced to remain in bed for five months, Buddy Webb, Costello moundsman, has practically returned to his 1937 pitching form . . . This was illustrated Sunday as he set Agriculture down, 11-2.

• • • •

Hurling and hitting highlights: Edgar Shinn, former Mount Rainier High School slabman, struck out eight and allowed only five hits as the Holbrook Dairy team defeated the Quantico Marines, 6 to 2, Sunday . . . He also collected three hits in four times at bat . . . George Taylor, who was Shinn's battery mate in high school and who still receives the slants of the slim right-hander, got a triple and double in three attempts . . . J. Grosheith, Michigan Athletic Club twirler, pitched three-hit ball as his team defeated the Blue Jay Juniors . . . Buddy Farley, catcher, and Harry Fisher, first baseman, collected nine hits to give the Lionel Athletic Club the championship of the Georgetown section . . . Buddy thumped three for four and Harry got four for five, two of which were doubles, as the Super Service crew, bowed, 10 to 8, last Sunday . . . Robert Hamilton and Dick Laughlin hit homers and in addition got two hits apiece in four times, to lead the hitting attack of the Virginia Red Sox as they won the championship of northern Virginia by taking a double-header from the Arlington Eagles Sunday . . . O'Neil Lyles and Rossen Herrick chucked masterful ball to capture the double victory . . . Adger Adair sent three triples to the far corners of the lot as his team, the Kenilworth Athletic Club, beat the Colesville Cardinals, 7 to 4 . . . Jimmy Curtin also slammed out three hits in four tries to aid in the win.

PERRY WILKINSON.

7-Up Team Plays National Savings

The 7-Up Athletic Club and National Savings will cross bats this afternoon in an Industrial League game on the East Ellipse at 5 o'clock. Frank DiNennan will be on the mound for 7-Up with Wright catching, while National Savings will use Garvey and Goodman.

7-Up will travel to Fredericksburg, Va., Sunday for a game with the Fredericksburg Red Sox.

All players are requested to meet at Tenth and H streets northwest not later than 10:30 o'clock Sunday morning. Frank DiNenna will make his first appearance since he was injured in a game three weeks ago.

Dr. Pepper to Play.

Walter Johnson's Dr. Pepper baseball team will meet the Indianhead nine Sunday on the latter's home field. Bill Helmer is slated to twirl for the Pepper boys.

Seeking Games.

The Washington Post Circulators would like to schedule games with strong out-of-town nines. Capital Heights is especially challenged. Call Potomac 2004.

Dupre Accuses Archibald of Running Away From Fight

Dupre holds a four-round technical knockout over Archibald, according to the record books.

Archibald, who whipped Mike Belloise last Monday in the first round of the N. B. A.-sanctioned featherweight elimination tournament, claims that he was the victim of a referee's prejudice in their bout for the New England bantamweight and featherweight title in April of 1937. The match was held in Providence.

Dupre explained his side of the fight to Ahearn:

"Joey was plenty cocky when he entered the ring that night, and figured he wouldn't have any trouble. I went after him in the first round, and won three rounds easily. As early as the second round, however, Archibald started butting and climbing.

Joey realized that he was getting beat, and that is why he did what he did in the fourth round. the referee had warned him repeatedly, and it looked like it was either defeat or disqualification—and Joey took the easiest way out. The ref did disqualify him.

"In Pete Scalzo I am meeting the best fighter in the whole featherweight division. But I know he's a sucker for a right hand punch."

Scalzo, winner of 41 out of 42 fights, handled by Pete Reilly, is ranked sixth by the National Boxing Association, and Dupre ninth.

Ahearn announced that the Scalzo-Dupre elimination match would be eight rounds. There will be another eight-rounder on the card, a six and two fours.

This tournament eventually will lead to the crowning of the new featherweight champion in the Nation's Capital, the promoters hope.

way. I knew they would be coming along pretty soon. Look at the power, and that kid Gordon has come back like a flash. He must have been a little nervous in the beginning, that's all. Why, that boy's a better second baseman than Charley Gehringer. And what about the pitching now? Four-hit games, five-hit games, six-hit games. One right after another.

July 12—Say, what's the delay up there at the stadium, anyway? The Yankees are doing all right, but what's got into those Indians? Maybe they don't know when they're licked. We keep on winning, but we never seem to catch up. Maybe this is going to be a real pennant race, after all!

No-Hitter for Breeden.

Jadaan Wins Hagerstown Feature Sprint in Sea of Mud; Pays $5.70

At the Post

With Bill Bennings

Selections at Hagerstown.

Dear Al:

Clocker Mike says it's funny how bad luck can run when a fellow is down. After the fourth race today, Mike had only 50 cents left. He got into a conversation with four fellows and someone suggested a beer. The quintet lined up and turned up the bottles. The man behind the bar looked for the money. One fellow laid down a $20 bill, another put down a $10 bill, another a $5 note and the fourth tossed a $1 bill out. Mike didn't want to look cheap, so he twirled his half-buck piece on the bar. "And, don't you know," said Mike, disgustedly, "that guy grabbed my four bits before it stopped spinning." I talked to Sonny Workman, Washington jockey, last night and he's going to Rockingham. Sonny has been idling recently due to an infected tooth and a suspension. The Vanderbilt Stable is shipping a division of horses to Rockingham and Workman will do the booting. I'm told that Tedious has been retired to the stud. George Morris, of the Maryland Racing Commission, was a visitor today as was Albert J. Boyle, president of the Charles Town Jockey Club. Two of the oldest active jockeys in America were second and third in today's first race. Charlie Jackson and Willie Obert, who rode long before many of the other jockeys were swinging on gates, brought their horses into the money. It is with high hopes that I pass these along. BILL.

Frist race—Red Nose, first on the reserve list, will like the off track and should take care of this company if sent into action. Cautious Bo was fairly consistent at Charles Town and deserves a chance to be close up. Wise Revue for the show end.

Second race—Shaggy Ann has plenty of speed and should go to the front with this kind. She is fit as hands make horses and gets the call. Small Change was prominent twice in recent Agawam races and is dangerous. Miss Adeline, first on the also eligible list, had no chance last out, when she carried a starter's strap around the track.

Third race—If the track stays soft, I look for Philigal to take this purse. She needs only the right ride. Reigh Tetrarch was improving in the closing weeks at Charles Town. Handley should improve with the change of tracks.

Fourth race—Buckley's Pride has had poor rides and bad racing luck. If this fellow breaks well, he may get home at long odds. Baldy demonstrated keen speed in that last, and is dangerous. Royal Veil for the show end.

Fifth race—Star Mint is bred for the going and ran one good race at Charles Town. This one may be a surprise package here. Dixie S. has plenty of early speed and is due respect. Scout Rose for the show award.

Sixth race—Zump, a son of Ed Cump, turned in a nice effort in New England before shipping here and seems to have an excellent chance. Gemwick and Aufoin for the place and show.

Dona Dulcin Is Beaten in Fast Finish

Quick Vine Gets Third Place; Root Gives Winner Good Ride.

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

Fair Grounds, Hagerstown, Md., July 13.—It looked as though the elements were putting on a "commercial" when an electrical storm preceded today's program, featured by the Potomac Edison Purse, named for the power company supplying the "juice" for this section. The rain that accompanied the lightning turned the track into the well-known sea of mud and that fact was more power to Jadaan, a 6-year-old gelding which operates for L. L. Westmoreland.

Considered to have a good chance when the track was as hard as King Herod's heart this morning, Jadaan's stock went up as the rain came down and he ran accordingly. With Jockey Buddy Root in the power house, Jadaan won the six and a half furlong sprint in a driving finish which saw Dona Dulcin second and Quick Vine third.

Camera Tried Out.

Jadaan had a favorite $5.70 price tag hanging on him. Just to try out the new Jones finish camera for the first time, the judges called for a picture. After the crowd saw the copy slide down the wire, the judges put up the numbers expected.

Root had to do some powerful (still punning) riding on Jadaan. Quick Vine lived up to her name by forging to the front at once while Jadaan was untangling himself. Once in the clear, Root sent Jadaan after Quick Vine and grabbed her with a furlong to go, taking command. In the meanwhile Dona Dulcin had been gaining momentum and she closed with a rush. Root was hustling for all he was worth at the end.

Those in the crowd of 4,000 who combined Blaze's Bob, a $21.60 shot in the first race, with Tell It, the first of three winners for Jockey Root and a $6.20 favorite, collected a $102.40 pay off in the daily double.

Root brought Magic Line from behind to win the fifth race. The son of Magic Wand paid $11.20 and caught Radial in closing furlong to win going away. Addis Ababa was third in the field of eight.

When Jaadan (No. 3), shown scooting across the finish line (extreme right), won the fourth race at Hagerstown yesterday, the judges were undecided about the winner of second-place money. So they called for this photo-finish picture which shows Dona Dulcin (No. 1) plenty of distance ahead of Quick Vine (No. 4). Jaadan was ridden by Buddy Root, Dona Dulcin by B. Everson, and Quick Vine by Herbie Lauch.

JADAAN, sent to contention between horses after breaking in close quarters, gained gradually on QUICK VINE to take command in closing furlong, but had to be kept to drive to stave off closing bid of DONA DULCIN. The latter, away last, worked way up with good energy and was going fastest at end. QUICK VINE took command at once, set good pace, but weakened.

Wheat Prices Drop 1½ Cents In Late Selling

Uncertainty as to Crop Loan Adds Impetus to the Decline.

By the Associated Press.

Uncertainties about the effects of the United States Government's wheat loan program did much to increase selling late today, and pull wheat prices down 1½ cents.

Influenced by action of wheat, the corn market lost gains that earlier had lifted values to new peaks for the season. Big purchases of corn to arrive in Chicago, about 1,000,000 bushels, tended also to nullify corn price advances. Contributing to downturns of wheat quotations were cooler temperatures northwest likely to minimize black rust damage to the spring crop.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were ⅞ to 1½ cents lower compared with yesterday's finish; July, 72⅝@72¾, September 73⅝@73⅞. Corn, ¼ cent off to ¼ cent up; July, 60⅝@60⅝, September 62@62⅛. Oats unchanged to ⅜ down; rye showing ½ to ⅞ drop, and provisions varying from 2 cents setback to 25 cents bulge.

Selling in the Final Hour Forced Stocks Down as Wheat and Cotton Declined.

New York, July 13.—Heaviness in cotton and wheat markets and a somewhat bearish view of the steel industry by Iron Age, probably were among factors which brought a sharp reversal in security prices today at a time when big board stocks were testing the high levels of the current movement. Selling, occurring in the last three quarters of an hour, which sent tickers behind floor transactions in a 2,618,950-share day, or about 1,000,000 shares more than on Tuesday, was concentrated in trading favorites.

This resulted in a net loss for the averages despite the final showing that more than twice as many listed stocks advanced as declined. Scores of preferred issues, in fact, finished with net gains of two or more points. It was another story, however, among active leaders. The suddenness of the shift from buoyancy to weakness suggested to some observers that professional traders are more active and public buyers less aggressive than recently estimated.

Last Hour Selling.

Quotations had been marked up steadily to the accompaniment of brisk business all day, reaching best points at the start of the last hour when key industrials and rails were 1 to 4 points higher, at this stage, however, waves of selling developed with only flabby support in evidence. Subsequent declines not only erased earlier improvement of the day but cut into Tuesday's gains.

The 100 stocks finished 0.07 point down, the 30 rails showing relatively larger losses than the 70 industrials. Steels and coppers were weakest on the down grade, while oils and rail equipments showed most resistance.

Commodities Irregular.

Cotton, after its brief rally of Tuesday, turned reactionary and ended with declines of 80 cents to $1.15 a bale, last prices representing a decline of 60 per cent or more of the June rise. Wheat succumbed to droppin, foreign markets and uncertainty over the amount of the Government loan, expected to be announced in the morning. Lesser commodities like wool tops, coffee, sugar, rubber, silk, hides and tin, were firmer.

Engagement of $5,800,000 in gold from Japan was announced. The extent of the swing in stock prices was illustrated by the 1.25 point range of the 100 key issues, and swings within 1.70 points for the 30 rails and 0.84 point for the 70 industrials. In the individual groups, gyrations were even more pronounced. The six leading steeels showing an average range of more than 2 points.

Leaders Show Losses.

Steel common moved up to 60½ before the switch in trend, closing at 56⅞ for a net loss of 2⅛. Chrysler's high was 69⅝, a new high, but the close at 66 represented a 1 point loss. Scores of other leaders turned in similar performances, International Harvester, Anaconda, Bethlehem Steel, Corn Products, Dow Chemical, International Business Machines, Minneapolis Honeywell, Owens Glass, Union Carbide and Sears-Roebuck showing losses of a point or more.

There were, however, a number of issues which closed behind plus signs, including Allied Chemical, up 4; Union Pacific, American Agricultural Chemical, American Sugar, Goodrich and Goodyear preferred issues, Hiram Walker, Remington-Rand preferred, Republic Steel convertible preferred, United Carbon, United States Freight, and others.

Bonds Held Steady.

Gloomy Federal deficit figures unsettled the market for United States Treasury bonds to a slight degree today, but in other respects the listed bond market remained cheerful. Local traction bonds engaged in another brisk advance, and low priced carrier lines moved forward more moderately. Convertibles gained a good tone from the equity improvement, and the tendency was maintained to the end. Foreign bonds were generally better, as well. Turnover was $8,730,000.

Deficit Was Expected.

Treasury deficit estimates were much in accordance with expectations, but they resulted in modest uncertainty among Treasury loans. Long term bonds fell 1-32 to 7-32 point, largely because institutional investors were less active. The guaranteed issues of the farm and home corporations were idle and soft. In were made in Treasury notes and counter dealings small concessions bills. Telephone bonds were firm in the face of the impending issue of a subsidiary, and best rated power and light operating bonds held well. Leading rails and industrials were quiet.

Interborough bonds were active and 1 to 3 points higher as the conviction grew that unification may be achieved within a measurable period Manhattan Elevated and B. M. T. bonds were generally better, although some liquidation appeared at best levels, modifying the gains. Some of the speculative industrial convertibles advanced rapidly, com-

Chain Stores Sales Decline

New York, July 13.—Chain stores showed a slight easing from the sharp decline in monthly sales in May, according to the monthly compilation released yesterday by Childs, Jeffries & Thorndike, Inc.

The first 25 chains reported an aggregate June volume of $250,976,204, a decrease of $20,005,728 or 8.9 per cent from the same month a year ago, as compared with the drop in May of 11.3 per cent. For the six months ending June 30 these chains had sales totaling $1,259,858,900, which compares with sales of $1,346,356,911 for June, 1937, a drop of $86,507,011 or 6.45 per cent.

However, the 1938 sales compare favorably with June, 1936, when the chains reported sales of $229,969,420 for the month and $1,205,651,559 for the same six months period, and again with June, 1935, when the sales were $196,862,269 for the month and $1,083,935,605 for the six months period.

The following is merely a brief outline of certain information contained in the Offering Prospectus and is subject to the more detailed statements in the Offering Prospectus and the Registration Statement, which also include important information not outlined or indicated herein. The Offering Prospectus, which must be furnished to each purchaser, should be read prior to any purchase of these Bonds.

THE COMPANY Southwestern Bell Telephone Company, all of the common stock of which, except Directors' qualifying shares, is owned by American Telephone and Telegraph Company, was incorporated in Missouri in 1882. The Company is engaged in the telephone business in Missouri, Arkansas, Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas and in a small portion of Illinois adjacent to St. Louis. The properties of the Company consist mainly of telephone instruments and facilities for their interconnection, the latter consisting chiefly of central office switching equipment and connecting lines. The Company is subject to regulation by the Federal Communications Commission and by state or local authorities in each of the states in which it operates, within their respective jurisdictions. The Federal Communications Commission has been engaged since 1935 in an investigation of American Telephone and Telegraph Company and its subsidiaries and presently has before it for its consideration a critical report, proposed by one of the Commissioners, more fully referred to in the Offering Prospectus.

Advances from American Telephone and Telegraph Company (5% Demand Notes)	3,500,000.00*
Seven Per Cent. Cumulative Preferred Stock—par value $100 per share	21,785,500.00
Common Stock—par value $100 per share	173,000,000.00

*At July 13, 1938, notes sold to Trustee of Pension Fund had been reduced to $8,307,553.39 and advances had increased to $8,600,000.

PURPOSE OF ISSUE The net proceeds, exclusive of accrued interest, from the sale of the $30,000,000 of Series C Bonds, after deducting the estimated expenses of the Company in connection with such sale, are expected to approximate $29,193,000. Such proceeds are to be used to reimburse the treasury of the Company for past expenditures for extensions, additions and improvements to its telephone plant and the retirement of funded debt. Upon such reimbursement of its treasury, the Company intends to use treasury funds approximately equal to such net proceeds for the following purposes: (1) $25,053,325 for the redemption at 115% of par value of its outstanding issue of $21,785,500 par value of Seven Per Cent. Cumulative Preferred Stock; and (2) approximately $4,140,000 for the partial repayment of advances from American Telephone and Telegraph Company, parent. The Company expects to continue its established practice of borrowing from American Telephone and Telegraph Company on demand notes as need therefor may arise.

1935	$73,594,576.51	$17,145,574.83	$3,198,857.49	$13,946,717.34
1936	79,917,476.65	20,945,379.34	2,150,987.00	18,794,392.34
1937	86,099,456.06	20,089,301.04	2,123,843.19	17,965,457.85

Due principally to a decrease in toll service revenues, to increases in wages and to increased taxes, the Company's "Total Income" for the 5 months ended May 31, 1938 was approximately 5% lower than for the corresponding months in 1937.

SERIES C BONDS The Series C Bonds will be issued under the Company's First and Refunding Mortgage, as supplemented, and, in the opinion of counsel for the Company, will be secured, equally with the Company's First and Refunding Mortgage 3½% Bonds, Series B, by a lien on substantially all real estate, buildings and telephone plant owned by the Company in Missouri, Arkansas, Oklahoma and Texas and appertaining to or useful in the transaction of its business in those States. The Mortgage does not cover any property in Kansas or Illinois.

Series C Bonds are limited to the amount of $30,000,000 now authorized. The Mortgage, however, permits the issuance of additional bonds of other series, which would rank equally with the Series B and Series C Bonds.

The Mortgage permits the Company, in certain instances, to dispose of property covered by the Mortgage without a release from or notice to the Trustees, and also provides for releases and substitutions of such property. No notice is required to be given to bondholders in connection with any such disposal, release or substitution.

UNDERWRITING Subject to certain terms and conditions, the Underwriters named in the Offering Prospectus have severally agreed to purchase an aggregate of $28,900,000 of these Bonds from the Company at 98%, or a total of $28,322,000, plus accrued interest. Such Bonds are to be offered to the public at 100%, or a total of $28,900,000, plus accrued interest. The underwriting discounts are 2%, or a total of $578,000. The payment for and delivery of such Bonds are to be made on July 19, 1938, but may be postponed to not later than July 29, 1938. The Company has contracted to sell privately the remaining $1,100,000 of Bonds on or before August 1, 1938, to the Trustee of the Pension Funds established by certain companies affiliated with the Company, without underwriting discounts or commissions, at 98%, or a total of $1,078,000, plus accrued interest.

Price 100% and Accrued Interest

The Underwriters, including the undersigned and the others named in the Offering Prospectus, have agreed to purchase $28,900,000 of these Bonds on the terms and conditions set forth in the Purchase Agreement, including the approval of legal matters by Messrs. Davis Polk Wardwell Gardiner & Reed, counsel for the Underwriters, and by Messrs. Bryan, Williams, Cave & McPheeters, counsel for the Company. It is expected that delivery of Bonds in temporary form will be made at the office of J. P. Morgan & Co. on or about July 19, 1938, against payment therefor in New York funds.

The Underwriters have authorized the purchase and sale, in the open market or otherwise, of these Bonds for their several accounts, either for long or short account, within the limits and during the period set forth in certain agreements referred to in the Offering Prospectus.

Further information, particularly financial statements, is contained in the Registration Statement on file with the Securities and Exchange Commission, and in the Offering Prospectus which must be furnished to each purchaser and is obtainable from the undersigned or from any other Underwriter of this issue.

Thomas Beats Smith in Okla. New Deal Test

Phillips and Key Close in Governor Race, Murray in 3d Place.

By the Associated Press

Oklahoma City, July 13.—Oklahoma Democrats emphasized their allegiance to the Roosevelt Administration today by nominating Senator Elmer Thomas for a third term and rejecting the gubernatorial bid of former Gov. W. H. (Alfalfa Bill) Murray, New Deal critic.

Thomas' campaign was marked by the friendly words spoken in his behalf by President Roosevelt three days before yesterday's primary.

Phillips in Close Race.

Leon C. Phillips, former speaker of the State House of Representatives, and W. S. Key, former State WPA administrator, drew into a close battle for the gubernatorial nomination. Phillips, who had piled up a substantial margin, saw it shaved to a slim lead as later returns piled in.

Both were far ahead of Murray, considered in advance the "man to beat."

Both Phillips and Key advocated co-operation with the President. Murray was referred to indirectly by Mr. Roosevelt as "nationally known as a Republican."

Phillips polled 170,502 votes in 3,427 precincts to 168,105 for Key and 140,514 for Murray.

Eight of Oklahoma's nine Representatives seeking re-election, all generally considered New Deal supporters, likewise gained renomination with little difficulty.

Liberal Wins.

It may be that the Administration gained a supporter, for in the Fifth District race which Representative Smith vacated to run for the Senate, Mike Monroney, known as an Oklahoma City liberal, was nominated.

Smith voted against the farm bill and the Government reorganization measure.

In the other races, Will Rogers won renomination as Congressman-at-Large, Representative Wesley Disney was renominated in the First District, Representative Jack Nichols in the Second, Representative Wilburn Cartwright in the Third, Representative Lyle Boren in the Fourth, Representative Ed Johnson in the Sixth, Representative Sam Massingale in the Seventh and Representative Phil Ferguson in the Eighth.

Ross Rizley, of Guymon, and Harry O. Glasser, of Enid, both indorsed by a State Republican convention, were leading respectively for the party's nomination for Governor and Senator.

Only One "Famous Name." Wins.

Oklahoma City, July 13 (AP).—Oklahoma's "famous name" candidates returned today to political obscurity—with but one exception, the originator of it all.

Will Rogers, school teacher, who startled the State by winning a 1932 Congressional election and has been doing it ever since, led the field for the Democratic nomination in yesterday's primary.

Some of the "famous names"—Mae West, Daniel Boone, Oliver Cromwell, Huey Long and Joe E. Brown—ran as well as third in their quests for Democratic nominations for State offices.

Park, Metropolitan Police Are Linked By New Teletype

Park and Metropolitan police became more closely linked with installation of a teletype at the headquarters of the former yesterday.

Henceforth all police reports from headquarters and the precincts will reach Park Police first hand. Lookouts and special cases which Park Police should follow up will be read the men when they report for duty.

It was announced also that a direct wire telephone has been installed between White House police and headquarters of Metropolitan Police.

Bob Burns Says—

I believe there is more diplomacy and less tact shown in Hollywood than in any other place in the world. Diplomacy is a sort of studied niceness that's put on to gain a point. The best definition for tact is one that Grandpa Snazzy told me when I was a boy.

He said: "Tact is what keeps an old man with snow white hair from reminding a young-looking red-headed woman of the times when they use'ta play together as children."

The Federal Diary

Reg. U. S. Patent Office.

If you happened to be walking down Pennsylvania avenue at a certain hour last night you may have noticed the great, round yellow moon dangling beside the lighted clock tower of the old Postoffice Building. It was just the same size as the clock and practically the same color.

For a moment we wondered if we were seeing double . . .

Moons make us think of moonlight cruises, which are something of a Washington institution. On Monday, St. Elizabeths Hospital Lodge, No. 28, A. F. G. E., will hold its third annual moonlight dance excursion at 8:45 p. m., on the S. S. Potomac, of the Potomac River Line. . . . The D. C. Federation of Federal Employe Unions is making plans for a moonlight trip on the Wilson liner, City of Washington, next Wednesday. . . . The same ship has been chartered for the evening of August 15 for a large party of Interiorites. Bob Mahoney, Interior's versatile and eccentric dancer, is preparing a nautical dance skit which appropriately comes from "Pinafore." J. L. Acuff, of PWA, is making arrangements.

National Archives employes and their families will hold "a grand outing" at Reservation No. 10, Rock Creek Park, Saturday, from 3 to 8. Rumors have arisen that girls' teams are forming to compete with the men in softball, horseshoe pitching and similar exhausting sports. In addition to this continuation of the war between men and women, we understand there will be a baseball contest between married and single men.

* * * *

An inviting week-end party is being held Saturday and Sunday by Labor Department Lodge, No. 228, A. F. G. E., at the Oaks, West River (Md.) Yacht Club. Three kinds of boating (speed, row, sail), swimming, dancing and various other forms of outdoor and indoor sport are offered, according to the solemn assurance of Charles F. Sharkey, president of the lodge. Others full of information on the matter include Caroline Brown, B. L. S.; Mary Nesbit, I. & N.; Edwin Holland, B. L. S., and Julian Raper, C. B.

While on the subject of hot-weather recreation, we want to call your attention to one very interesting way to spend your vacation. Some Washingtonians in past years have taken advantage of the increasingly popular Trail Rider trips, conducted by the American Forestry Association, with the cooperation of the United States Forest Service and the National Park Service.

These trips are two-week horseback expeditions into the real American wilderness that still survives in remote parts of national forests of the West. The north end of Rock Creek Park is O. K., but the Sawtooth Wilderness of Idaho sounds a little better.

Brighter skies are in the offing for employes of the National Agricultural Research Center at Beltsville, Md., where Agriculture's personnel bureau is undertaking an extensive job survey.

Roy Hendrickson, the bureau's new chief, said yesterday that the inquiry is designed to determine the jobs that would best be placed under civil service and also to correct whatever discrepancies may exist in the pay roll list. U. F. W. A. tells us that Elmer Brown, president of the Beltsville local, is also collecting data.

Notes from Interior: Ronald M. Holmes, chief clerk of National Park Service, was recently congratulated on his fiftieth birthday by Interior's chief clerk, Floyd E. Detson. Holmes' associates presented flowers to him . . . Mrs. William Gates is back at Interior under a temporary appointment. She is none other than Harriet Reed, one of the finalists in last fall's beauty contest. She quit the Office of Indian Affairs to marry a professor at Clemson College . . . Blanche Keefe is a stenographic appointee in Reclamation from Nebraska . . . Those two tall Indian lads in Interior are brothers—Howard and O. K. Walkingstick—both students at G. W., active in athletics, members of T. K. E. fraternity . . . (To be continued.)

New officers of A. F. G. E.'s Interior Department Lodge are president, Merritt Barton, National Park Service; first vice president, Frederick A. Heffernan, General Land Office; second vice president, Ernest R. Moose, Indian Office; secretary-treasurer, Eugenia E. Miller, General Land Office; sergeant at arms, Fred H. White, Secretary's Office; delegate to the September national convention, George A. Warren, Solicitor's Office; delegates to the District department, Clinton A. Quencer, Heffernan and Warren.

Civil service examinations will be held for social worker (psychiatric), Veterans' Administration; home extension agent and junior home extension agent, Indian Field Service, Interior; home economist and associate home economist, Bureau of Home Economics, Agriculture; junior blueprint operator, junior photostat operator, under blueprint operator, under photostat operator.
